Hatch Measure Is Sidetracked In Senate for Farm Fund Bill

Measure Virtually Erases Economies Thus Far Voted

PASSAGE SEEN

Extension of Trade Program Also Up This Week in Senate

Washington—(AP)—Exchanging one big issue for another, the senate appeared ready today to lay aside its squabble over the Hatch anti-politics law in order to take up a farm appropriations bill which virtually wipes out all the economies voted this year.

The swap was a prelude to one of the busiest weeks of the congressional session. In two or three days the senate will debate extension of the reciprocal trade program, and the house will consider tomorrow the $655,000,000 naval expansion bill.

An armistice on the Hatch act fight was proposed Saturday after senators who want to broaden the law's provisions declared that opponents were filibustering. The question is whether state employes paid in part by federal funds should be barred from political activity, as are federal workers.

Foes of the extension—a sizeable bloc of Democrats—were jubilant over the delay, but Senator Hatch (D-N. M.) expressed confidence that the debate would be resumed after the senate disposes of the farm and trade bills.

G. O. P. Backs Hatch

Republicans, who have kept silent during the battle between two Democratic factions, promised to support Hatch in demanding ultimate action.

The farm fight appeared a little more one-sided than the Hatch controversy, with economy advocates acknowledging that they had little chance of victory.

The house-approved farm bill was increased $309,793,584 by the senate appropriations committee, which added $212,000,000 for parity payments and recommended $100,000,000 for agricultural loans.

The question of additional taxes to finance enlarged benefits for farmers was discussed at a White House conference today between President Roosevelt and congressional leaders.

Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) the majority leader, said the question came up "in a general way" at the regular Monday morning parley of senate and house leaders at the White House.

No decisions were made, Barkley added.

Resolution Shelved

The house pigeonholed a resolution today by Representative Hoffman (R-Mich.) calling on the war department to report on use of department property by delegates to the recent meeting of the American Youth Congress.

A report of the house military affairs committee, recommending that the resolution not pass, was approved by voice vote.

In its report, the committee quoted a letter from the department asserting that the department was put to no expense, that the commanding officer at Ft. Myer, Va., received an appeal "from the White House" to permit some of the delegates to sleep at the fort; that the department was closed at the time and that permission was granted by the Ft. Myer commandant under the authority of any military commander to relieve distress in an emergency.

Census Case Against Kenosha Man Dropped By U. S. Commissioner

Milwaukee—(AP)—James Rosselli, Kenosha shoe repairman who refused to answer census questions until they were "put to me polite" was cleared today of federal charges lodged against him after a row with a census official.

United States Commissioner Floyd E. Jenkins, acting at the request of assistant United States District Attorney E. J. Koelzer, dismissed the warrant which accused Rosselli of failing to give complete answers to John W. Girman, Kenosha census enumerator.

Koelzer said the attorney general's office at Washington had authorized the dismissal because "Rosselli had changed his defiant attitude and had given the census bureau all the information requested of him."

After an episode in which Girman and Rosselli each claimed he had been shoved by the other, Rosselli submitted last Friday to interrogation by Donald M. Farris, Racine, census area director.

Congressman Keefe To Seek Reelection

Oshkosh—(AP)—Representative Frank B. Keefe, Oshkosh, will seek reelection next fall as congressman from the Sixth district. Mr. Keefe said he has no intention of becoming a candidate for the United States senate, although his candidacy had been suggested in opposition to Robert M. LaFollette.

ON WAY HOME

Sporting a new suit, Harold E. "Whitey" Dahl, a native of Sidney, Ill., is shown after he boarded the American Export liner Exiria at Sevilla, Spain, for the trip back to the United States after months spent in Spanish war prisons. Dahl, an aviator for the Loyalists during the Spanish Civil war, was shot down by Generalissimo Franco's gunners in July, 1937.

Polling places will open at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and will remain open until 7 o'clock in the evening.

Interest in the primary races centers around the contest for the city clerk's post, which will be vacated by Carl J. Becher May 1. Becher is retiring to go into the accounting business.

Two Army Airmen Killed in Crash

Plane Crashes During Fog In Wild Hill Country in Kansas

Sharon Springs, Kans.—(AP)—Two army fliers, Major Devereux Myers and Corporal Maurice E. Melvin, crashed in flames in the wild, fog-shrouded hill country southwest of here last night and were killed.

Myers' body was buried under the glowing wreckage and was almost cremated. Melvin was thrown clear but his body was badly burned and his clothes were seared away. Myers was 53.

The ship was an A-17-A type low-wing attack monoplane.

Enroue from Albuquerque, N. M., to Lowry field, Denver, their base, Myers radioed the Trinidad, Colo., airport:

"I'm 15 miles due west of Trinidad. We're hitting soup and I'm turning east."

"Soup" is flying men's language for fog.

Myers was a native of Virginia. His family includes his wife, Marjorie, of Denver. Melvin was the son of Mrs. Eva Melvin, Olivet, Mich.

The bodies were brought to Sharon Springs mortuary.

Work Half an Hour To Free Crash Victim

Milwaukee—(AP)—Seriously injured when his automobile and a street car collided head-on, Attorney John E. Blackstone, 30, of Waukesha, lay imprisoned in a wrecked machine more than a half-hour today before firemen were able to free him through an opening cut with oxy-acetylene torches.

Several hundred persons watched the rescue. Blackstone suffered fractured ribs, a brain concussion and severe body bruises.

Hollywood Writer Is Found Dead in Florida

Fort Myers, Fla.—(AP)—The body of a man identified by neighbors as John Monk Saunders, Hollywood screen writer, was found hanging in the closet of his winter cottage at Ft. Myers beach today.

Coroner Roy Lamberton, who examined the body, said there was no doubt that Saunders committed suicide. He said no inquest was necessary.

Believe Indian Was Killed by Hit-Run Driver

Investigate Circumstances In Death of Oneida Man

AUTOPSY IS ORDERED

Body of Peter Antone, 71, Found in Yard of Tavern

County authorities today were investigating the death of Peter Antone, 71, Oneida Indian, whose body was found lying in the yard of the Al Manders tavern on County Trunk E south of Oneida about 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The man apparently was the victim of a hit-run driver.

Antone, route 2, West DePere had a broken hip and was bruised badly about the face and body. An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of death and an inquest will be held. Raymond P. Dohr, district attorney, said.

Manders, who discovered the body said the man had been in his tavern until he locked up Saturday night. It was said that the man may have been struck on the road and then carried to the tavern yard, but Undersheriff Fred Frank stated that no traces of an accident could be found along the road in the vicinity of the tavern.

Several persons were questioned by Outagamie and Brown county authorities, but no clues as to the car involved in the accident or its driver have been uncovered.

An inquest jury was called and it viewed the body which was taken to the Ryan Funeral home, De-Pere. Members of the jury are Mel VandenBerg, Henry DeValk, Albert Skenandore, Art Metoxen, T. Hill and John VandenBerg, route 2, West DePere.

Antone is survived by one brother Nathaniel Antone, Split Rock.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Episcopal church, Oneida. Burial will be in the parish cemetery.

Ninth Indictment in Federal Inquiry Is Returned in Chicago

Chicago—(AP)—A federal grand jury investigating Chicago's gambling fraternity returned its ninth indictment today, accusing John F. Flanagan of attempting to evade $51,922.43 in taxes on his income from 1936 to 1938.

Government investigators characterized Flanagan as "a big shot" in the gambling syndicate and said he managed the 4020 club at 4020 Ogden avenue.

They added that the club was owned by William R. Johnson, who was named March 1 in an indictment charging him with attempting to evade a tax of $1,389,919.98 on which were tacked penalties and interest of $842,577.43.

In Flanagan's case, the grand jury charged that his income from "miscellaneous speculations and gambling" over the three-year period was $208,201.37. The indictment stated he reported a net income of $17,195 for the period and paid taxes totaling $570.60.

ADMITS SHOOTING

Police at Columbia, S. C., said Mrs. May Walker Burleson (above), 51, broke a two-day silence during which she protested her mind was clouded, by admitting that she fatally shot the wife of her former husband, a U. S. army colonel. She said her mind was filled with thoughts of her "wrecked home."

Welles Launches Talks at London On British Aims

Officials are Friendly but Skeptical as Discussions Begin

London—(AP)—In an atmosphere that was friendly but unmistakably skeptical, Sumner Welles today explored Great Britain's official attitude on war and peace aims in talks with national leaders.

The United States undersecretary of state disclosed that the memorandum made public in Paris outlining American desires for free world trade and a riddance of fear in the peace to come after the European war had been given to other governments he had visited.

Welles reiterated that he had brought no proposals of any kind to Europe and, refusing to express views on anything—even the appearance of London—he repeated that his report was for President Roosevelt only.

Will See King

He said he expected to see Premier Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano when he returns to Rome on his way to the United States but does not plan to visit Ireland or re-visit Germany. He is to leave for Rome, by way of Paris, Thursday.

A private audience with King George VI at Buckingham palace was the first item on the itinerary of the second, busy day President Roosevelt's personal investigator spent in the British capital.

Formal talks with Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax were to follow.

Discussing the possible results of the conferences, the London press was polite but frank. Their comment was summed up by the Daily Mail:

"The visibility was decidedly poor and glimpses even of the immediate future are apt to be misleading."

Banker Charges WPA Probers Intimidated Witnesses at Inquiry

Indianapolis—(AP)—Counsel for Arthur V. Brown, Indianapolis bank president indicted for alleged conspiracy to defraud the government through diversions of WPA labor and funds alleged today in a federal court plea in abatement that WPA investigating agents intimidated grand jury witnesses by using "fraud, deceit and duress."

Frank C. Dailey, former district attorney and Brown's attorney, also charged the indictment in which Brown was named as a conspirator with Miss Elizabeth C. Claypool and Carl F. Kortepeter, former WPA co-ordinator, was illegal because women were excluded as prospective grand jurors.

Among the accusations made against the WPA investigating agents were charges that witnesses were taken from their beds late at night and threatened by agents; that the agents "put into the witnesses mouths the statement said agents wished them to make; that witnesses were threatened with prosecution and were told by the agents "not to be scared because two witnesses died in WPA offices while being interviewed."

Scandinavians Hope for Peace as Allies Renew Offers of Aid to Finns

France and Britain to Act If 'Further Aid' Is Asked

NO NEW PLEA MADE

Prepared to Provide 'All Available Resources,' Commons Told

London—(AP)—Great Britain and France have informed Finland that they are ready "to proceed immediately and jointly to the help of Finland" with "all available resources" if the Finnish government should ask for "further aid," Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons today.

Later, a statement from his office said that "the prime minister desires to make it clear that no appeal for further aid has yet been received from the Finnish government."

Asked by Labor Leader Clement Attlee for a statement on the Russian-Finnish negotiations, Chamberlain said:

"The house will be aware that both the French and British governments have sent and are continuing to send material assistance to Finland. This has been of considerable value to the Finnish forces.

"As his majesty's government and the French government have already informed the Finnish government, they are prepared in response to an appeal from them for further aid to proceed immediately and jointly to the help of Finland, using all available resources at their disposal."

Silent on Peace Move

Asked if he could say anything regarding the question of settlement of the Russian-Finnish conflict Chamberlain said:

"I am afraid I have no information which is sufficiently reliable to give the house at the present moment."

Replying to a question about an earlier disclosure of a Russian approach to Britain with proposed peace terms for Finland, Chamberlain said:

"It would be untrue to say that the British government had been asked to mediate, but there was an occasion on which the Soviet ambassador mentioned certain terms which his government would be prepared to offer to Finland, and his majesty's government did not feel able to pass those terms on to Finland."

Attlee asked if any aid sent to Finland would be in "fulfillment of our obligations under the covenant of the League of Nations and in cooperation with other states similarly bound."

Chamberlain replied: "It certainly will be in accordance with our obligations under the covenant. As to the cooperation with other states, I have already mentioned that France is in association with ourselves. I cannot say what other states might feel bound to do."

"Does this not mean that it is tantamount to us going to war with Russia?" asked Laborite Alexander Kirkwood.

"We have not arrived at that yet," replied Chamberlain.

Drowns After His Auto Overturns Into Creek

Monroe, Wis.—(AP)—Carl Krupke, 76, of Warren, Ill., drowned when his automobile left Highway 11 and overturned in a creek near South Wayne yesterday.

Mrs. Krupke, 72, was momentarily stunned but regained consciousness in time to break a window and escape. She was unable to free her husband.

It was believed Krupke was blinded by the setting sun as he drove toward a bridge approach.

Newborn Boy Put Into Improvised 'Iron Lung'

Herrin, Ill.—(AP)—The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey, born prematurely, clung to life here today in an iron lung, improvised from an old oil barrel.

The 25-year old father, an electrician, who constructed the makeshift apparatus, was attempting to make a second one, expected to be more permanent than the first.

FIRST LADY AND A HOPEFUL

The Women's National Press club's annual achievement dinner in Washington brought together the nation's first lady and several who aspire to the honor after 1940. Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey (left), wife of the Republican district attorney of New York city, and Mrs. Roosevelt are shown here.

43 Indicted in New York on Charges of Part in Alleged Million Dollar Bootleg Plot

New York—(AP)—A sergeant of New York state police, a former sheriff of Rockland county, the game warden of the county and 40 others were indicted today in what the government described as a million dollar bootleg conspiracy.

Former Sheriff John E. Cook, Haverstraw; Frank Manion, also of Haverstraw, who was Cook's deputy; Harold J. Quinn, a state trooper, and Everett Knapp, the county game warden, were among those indicted.

Cook, who was sheriff from 1934 to 1936, his deputy and the police sergeant were alleged to have been on the pay roll of an illicit liquor syndicate which defrauded the government of 1,010,800 in liquor taxes through the operation of 17 illicit stills in Rockland and Orange counties.

Four men named in the indictment were alleged to have owned and operated the stills. They went to jail last May after their conviction for similar activities in Dutchess county. Convicted with them were 10 others, who were named also in the present indictment.

As an outgrowth of the Dutchess county case, Hiram C. Carroll, former sheriff of that county, was convicted and fined $5,000 after evidence was presented that Carroll had accepted $150-a-week to wink at liquor law violations.

Assistant United States Attorney Richard C. Burke who prosecuted the Carroll case obtained today's indictment.

British-Italian Dispute Is Ended

Chamberlain Hopes Trade Negotiations Will Be Resumed

London—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain, reporting to the house of commons on the weekend settlement of the British-Italian coal dispute, declared today "it may be hoped that the way now has been reopened for resumption of trade talks to the mutual advantage of the two countries."

Britain had embargoed exports of German coal to Italy. The Rome government lodged an unusually strong protest, pointing out that Italy was dependent almost wholly upon foreign coal for her home industries.

Britain's reply was to seize all Italian ships which left Netherlands ports with German coal after the blockade went into effect. Then on Saturday night came the sudden announcement of settlement of the dispute, with Britain releasing 13 Italian ships loaded with German coal which she had seized and held at her contraband control point off southeast England, and Italy agreeing not to send any more ships to Rotterdam for German coal.

General Penaranda to Be Bolivian President

La Paz, Bolivia—(AP)—Election of General Enrique Penaranda, former army chieftain, as president of Bolivia, was indicated today by the ministry of the interior on the basis of nearly complete returns from yesterday's voting.

With four of the eight departments still unheard from, the ministry said, General Penaranda had received more than 70 per cent of the votes cast.

Reich Marks Time Pending Word on Talks at Moscow

Officials Silent on Berlin Visit of Former Finnish Chief

Berlin—(AP)—The prevailing impression in Berlin today was that Germany would mark time on any move of her own in connection with the Finnish-Russian peace talks pending definite word on the course of the Moscow negotiations.

Uncertainty and silence characterized the Berlin visit of Per Evind Svinhufvud, former president of Finland. He was reported to have had several "private" conversations with Germans but with no top rank officials.

In Finnish quarters it was said he likely would go on to Rome for talks with Premier Mussolini but the time of departure was undecided.

Adolf Hitler's "on-to-victory" speech yesterday in observance of Germany's Memorial day contained no reference to the Finnish-Russian situation. It was rather a proclamation of undying struggle against Germany's enemies — "imperialist England and France."

"The world desires our dissolution," the fuehrer told 600 invited guests in the courtyard of the Zeughaus—military museum — whole

Buckner, Gillespie Refused Review by U. S. Supreme Court

Washington—(AP)—A contention that their conviction was obtained with the aid of "incompetent and irrelevant testimony" from chorus girls and movie stars failed today to obtain a supreme court review for William J. Buckner, Jr., and William J. Gillespie.

They were convicted after a dramatic two-week trial in the federal district court at New York on a charge of devising a scheme to defraud the owners or holders of Philippine Railway company gold bonds.

Specifically they were charged with violating the mail fraud statute. Buckner was sentenced to two-years' imprisonment and fined $2,500. Gillespie was sentenced to 18 months and fined $2,500. Their conviction was sustained by the federal circuit court at New York.

U. S. Newspaperman on Trial in Tokio Court

Tokio—(AP)—After a brief preliminary examination during which Judge Sanehiro Hotta said "this case is liable to impair the peace and order," James Young, American newspaperman, went on trial today in the Tokio district court on charges of spreading false rumors.

The criminal court's doors were closed to the public, but exceptions were made of Young's wife and a United States embassy representative. Three Japanese attorneys defended the International News Service correspondent.

Arrested Jan. 21, Young was held incommunicado for several days before he was accused formally of sending to the United States "extremely slanderous news reports regarding the Japanese forces in various parts of China."

Delegation Reported On Way Home but Doesn't Arrive

SEEK PLEDGES

Germany and Italy May Guarantee Peace To Finland

Stockholm—(AP)—Scandinavia held high hopes today that a peace agreement would be reached between Finland and Soviet Russia in their three and one-half month conflict.

Newspapers were unanimous in expressing belief that a peace agreement was near at hand, but there was no confirmation that a decision actually had been reached.

The Finnish delegation which went to Moscow last week was reported this morning to have left for home with the peace conditions by way of Stockholm, but the men failed to arrive and Swedes concluded they still were conferring in Kremlin.

See Early Decision

The belief was emphasized in informed quarters that the whole question of peace or continued war now has reached a point of final decision and that an announcement can be expected at any time.

The possibility that Germany and Italy might guarantee a Russian-Finnish peace was reported, meanwhile, in the Scandinavian press.

Finland's negotiators were generally assumed to have asked guarantees and it was expected that the Finnish public, fearful of a "Finnish Munich," would insist on assurances against renewed Soviet attack if the present hostilities are ended.

Reports of a possible Finnish-Swedish-Norwegian defense union, however, were regarded skeptically in informed quarters.

Demilitarized Zone

Some observers said the primary guarantee Finland would want with a peace settlement would be a demilitarized zone along the revised frontier with full opportunity to reconstruct her defenses.

These are the terms informed sources say Russia has offered:

1. A new Karelian isthmus border, leaving Viipuri on the Finnish side but placing a large part of the Mannerheim line in Russian territory.

2. Retention by Russia of islands in the Gulf of Finland but with Hanko, port on the southwestern tip of Finland, and the far northern Petsamo area remaining to Finland.

German-Italian guarantees, the reports said, would be in addition to any safeguards to Finnish security contained in a peace agreement.

FINNS ANXIOUS

Helsinki—(AP)—Swiftly-changing situations, swaying between peace and war, kept Finland in anxious suspense today.

First, official disclosure of peace talks in Moscow suggested that her defense of independence was almost over. Then, within a few hours, bitter words from the Moscow radio hinted it might be far from ended.

Perplexed Finns gathered that the Moscow negotiations might have hit a snag.

On one side was the surprising news of the Finnish peace delegation; on the other, reports that Finnish forces still were battling a Russian army hammering with undetermined fury at Viipuri.

On one side, the Finns were told that Soviet Russia had named her price; on the other, they learned that red army bombers again had bombed civilian populations.

Terms of the Russian proposals were not disclosed and the Finnish announcement made clear that "no decision has been taken up to the present."

Delegation in Moscow

The government merely told the warring republic yesterday that a four-man Finnish delegation was in Moscow at Russia's invitation and had begun direct negotiations "to find out whether possibilities exist for a cessation of hostilities and a restoration of peace."

But early today, after a two-day silence degarded as significant, the Moscow radio turned oral guns on Premier Risto Ryti, head of the Finnish negotiators, and renewed appeals to Finnish soldiers to revolt.

((Attacks on the Finnish government continued also in the Russian press yesterday. Although the invitation is to discuss peace implied recognition of the Helsinki government, an article in the Moscow trade union organ, Trud, again hailed the communist Terijoki regime, which Russia had called Finland's only legal government.

(Swedish and Danish newspapers still were optimistic that the negotiations were on the verge of success despite the Moscow broadcast.

'In Stockholm, informed sources said Russia had offered Finland a new Karelian isthmus frontier, leaving Viipuri to the Finns but taking a large part of the Mannerheim line.)

Large Powers of Europe are Maneuvering for Positions While Finns Await Aid From Allies

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

New York—(AP)—One point stands out impressively, if crudely, among the complications of the Russo-Finnish peace move-that little Finland's plight is largely incidental in the maneuvering of the powers for position in the greater crisis of the war between Germany and the Anglo-French allies.

That may seem like a cynical viewpoint, but we can't get at the truth by side-steping facts.

The Finns are by no means masters of their own fate. That is being determined for them mainly by the fall of the cards from the hands of Nazi Germany and the allies.

The big fellows are rushing for places of vantage in the major conflict—come sudden peace or bloody fighting with the advent of spring.

The Russo-Finnish situation is of vast strategic importance in the European upheavel proper. The allies are widely credited with wanting this baltic war continued: Hitler wants it terminated—for reasons explained later.

Finland is faced with a decision as to whether to proceed with the fight or accept territorial losses which at best will be hateful to her. A few weeks ago the victorious Finns would have rejected any terms affecting their territorial integrity, because they expected help from the allies.

That help not having arrived in sufficient volume, the Finns now probably will feel it best to make concessions, irrespective of future prospects of assistance. However, they aren't likely to accept a conqueror's terms if there is hope of allied aid at all, and possibly not under any circumstance.

Now let's take a quick glance at the positions of the other nations immediately concerned. It's like this:

Russia—The reds would like to get the war over with for fear of Anglo-French intervention. Germany is putting pressure on the bolshevists to end the conflict. The reds undoubterly bit off a lot more than they expected to have to chew, but aren't likely to quit now without substantial territorial concessions from Finland.

Anglo-French allies—As already stated, they appear anxious for the war to continue. They have sent some help to Finland, and might

Ribbentrop Goes To Vatican for Talk With Pope

German Foreign Minister Also Has Audience With King Vittorio

Rome—(AP)—Foreign Minisher Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany visited Pope Pius XII today after an audience with King Vittorio Emanuele.

Further political conversations with Premier Mussolini were to follow later in a day of intense activity which observers found to indicate two things:

1. Adolf Hitler is making a friendly gesture toward the Vatican.

2. He is seeking Italy's views on the possibility of an extension of the European war either by the British-French allies or Germany herself.

The German diplomat arrived at the Vatican City at 10:50 a. m. (3:50 a. m., C.S.T.) A few minutes later he was ushered into the presence of the pontiff for a private audience.

The German's appointment with Mussolini, the second in as many days, was set for 5 p. m., after a preliminary conversation with Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano at 4:30. Von Ribbentrop saw Ciano yesterday, too.

Guest At Dinner

The only social event arranged for the visitor was a dinner to be given by Ciano tonight at the fashionable Chess club, after which Von Ribbentrop will entrain for Berlin.

The significance of the unheralded visit to King Vittorio Emanuele was not ascertained immediately. Officials described it as merely a ceremonial call.

There was a belief, however, that the king desired to ask him a special question.

Von Ribbentrop was received at the Vatican with full honors accorded foreign ministers. Greeted by high papal dignitaries, he and seven members of his staff were taken from the German embassy to the Holy See in papal automobiles.

The German foreign minister was presented to the pontiff by Diego von Bergen, German ambassador to the Vatican.

The Vatican ceremony spared Von Ribbentrop the question of deciding whether to kneel before the pope. In the case of statesmen, the pontiff extends his hand in a manner to indicate that obeisance is not expected.

Von Ribbentrop was said to have bowed three times.

He talked with the pope for an hour in German, which the pontiff speaks fluently.

Von Ribbentrop also paid the customary call of visiting diplomats to Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papal secretary of state. In all, the German's visit to the Vatican lasted two hours and 15 minutes.

20 More Subpenas Are Issued in U. S. Probe in Chicago

Officials of Firms Ordered to Produce Data on Ready Mixed Concrete

Chicago—(AP)—The federal government's investigation of the building industry in the Chicago area was resumed today with the issuance by Judge Charles E. Woodward of 20 subpenas duces tecum directing as many companies to produce all records relating to ready mixed concrete in the building and paving trade.

The court, acting further on the application of Leo F. Tierney, special assistant United States attorney general, ordered that the records be produced by March 27, when the federal grand jury which has been carrying on the inquiry, will resume its sessions.

The government already has obtained four anti-trust indictments since the beginning of the building trades investigation in Chicago. These involved the plywood, tile, cutstone and electrical industries.

The subpenas demand that the companies produce correspondence and other communications to and from concerns in the building industry, trade associations and unions, from 1928 on.

Federal investigators said they had learned that ready made concrete equipment had not been used in the Chicago area for many years, although 20 other major cities had had the benefit of the equipment.

Labor Leaders Named

Among those named in the subpenas were Michael Carrozzo, head of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Construction Laborers of America, and William E. Maloney, head of local No. 150 of the International Union of Operating Engineers. Correspondence to and from these officials, as well as to and from other officials and agents of related unions, were demanded.

Concerns directed to produce their records included:

T. L. Smith company, Milwaukee; Butler-Bin company, Waukesha, Wis; Chain Belt company, Milwaukee; Jaeger Machine company, Columbus, Ohio; Koehring Manufacturing company, Milwaukee; Leach Construction Machine Sales and Service company, Oshkosh, Wis.

Blow-Knox company, Pittsburgh; Knickerbocker company, Jackson, Mich; Gilson Brothers company, Fredonia, Wis; Heltzel Steel Form and Iron company, Warren, Ohio; C. S. Johnson company, Champaign, Ill; Neff and Fry company, Camden, Ohio.

R. L. Concrete Machinery company, Kendallville, Ind; Concrete Transport Mixer company, St Louis; B. M. Cropp and Company, Thomas W. Noble company and Anchor Manufacturing company, all of Chicago.

Tierney said that the Chicago area, which allegedly had been excluded from the benefits of ready made concrete, included Lake, McHenry, DeKalb, Kane, DuPage, Will, Kaukakee, Kendall and Grundy counties.

Regents Deny That Budget Cuts Will Cripple University

F. J. Sensenbrenner Says Reports Conveyed Wrong Impression

Madison—(AP)—University of Wisconsin regents will start work soon on the budget for the next school year—a subject which prompted two members of the board to deny reports that an attempt was being made to "cripple" the university.

Regents A. T. Holmes, of La Crosse, and Frank J. Sensenbrenner, of Neenah, expressed dissatisfaction at a board meeting here Saturday over published accounts of how recent budget cuts had affected the institution.

"There is not a regent on this board who would do anything to cripple the university or change its effectiveness," Holmes said. "It's just a question of getting a dollar's work for every dollar of state funds."

Sensenbrenner said newspaper articles had conveyed an erroneous impression about the attitude of the regents on financial matters and he suggested that public information on the budget be centralized in the hands of President Clarence A. Dykstra.

Dykstra said he had told an interviewer that Governor Heil's emergency board and the regents would be able to "work out something that would not cripple" the university, but that his remarks had not been fully quoted.

The board voted to award four honorary degrees at the 87th commencement June 17.

Recipients of the degrees will be: Justice John D. Wickhem, of the state supreme court; Mrs. Gertrude Slaughter, of Madison; Dr. Herbert S. Gasser, of New York, director of the Rockefeller institute and David A. Crawford, of Chicago, president of the Pullman company.

Mrs. Anna Keller, 1014 N. Division street, returned home Sunday from St. Elizabeth Hospital where she was confined for the last two weeks.

walls were lined with tanks and guns and other trophies of the Polish campaign.

"Our only reply can be the greatest pledge of all times: On to victory!"

Hitler looked pale and more solemn than usual. His gray uniform, barren of insignia, offered a sharp contrast to the glittering uniforms of his audience.

"As fuehrer of the nation, as chief of state, as supreme commander of the armed forces I live but for one task: Day and night to think of victory, struggle, work and fight for victory, if necessary not to spare my own life in the conviction that this time Germany's future will be secured for centuries . . .

"This war, forced upon us, must turn out to be the most glorious victory in German history . . ."

Underlying the fuehrer's declarations was an announcement yesterday by the high command that a tenth of Great Britain's tanker fleet had been destroyed.

The communique also told of "considerable artillery and patrol activity" on the western front, reconnaissance flights over eastern France and an air battle between seven German planes and 10 French including Curtiss (American) types, in which a French-manufactured plane was said to have been shot down.

Of enemy tanker losses:

"Since the beginning of the war, German sea forces have sunk 46 enemy tankers and neutral tankers on their way to England with a total gross tonnage of 331,543.

"Included were 32 English tankers with a gross tonnage of 230,125, thus, 10 per cent of the English fleet of tankers has been destroyed."

Lenten Thought For Today

Monday, March 11. And it shall come to pass . . . that I will put thee in a clift of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by. Read Exodus 33:17-23.

This old narrative voices the faith of its time, but how true it is to our human estate. We ask for some hilltop vision, some bright glory of life and the answer is shadow, sorrow and mystery—just a "clift in the rock." What a twisted providence!

But the "clift in the rock" may become a place of revelation. It compels us to think out why we are there; it challenges us to find a way out, it nourishes patience, summons resource, gives new meaning to faith and tempers courage. Churches, nations, individuals have again and again come up victorious out of their clift-in-the-rock experiences, with new-born strength. In retrospect they have seen that God was there and that the passing shadow was His kindest answer to the prayer for light.

Prayer: "Father, to Thee we look in all our sorrow,
Thou art the fountain whence our healing flows.
Dark though the night, joy cometh with the morrow;
Safely they rest who on Thy love repose. Patient, O heart - - - -
Be not cast down, disquieted in vain:
Yet shalt thou praise Him, when these darkened furrows
Where now He plougheth, wave with golden grain." Amen.

Utilities Plan to Spend $19,000,000 During the Year

Money Will Go for Maintenance, Additions to Properties

Milwaukee—(AP)—Bruno Rahn of Milwaukee, president of the Wisconsin Utilities association, announced today that 25 affiliated gas, electric and transportation companies planned to spend $19,842,223 for maintenance and additions to their properties during 1940.

"That aggregate sum placed in company budgets exceeds expenditures made for the same purposes in 1939 by $4,656,592," he told the opening convention session of the association's gas section.

"The companies plan to extend their operations because they believe business will improve and because they feel the public will protect the utility industry against the attacks of unscrupulous politicians and those groups who seek to undermine confidence in business enterprise."

Rahn said 1940 payroll disbursements of member companies were expected to exceed those of 1939, when $21,574,376 was paid to 12,131 employes.

"One of the most discouraging factors facing us is the ever mounting tax burden," he declared. "Companies were forced to collect from our customers the stupendous sum of $12,906,853 which was paid by companies in taxes to local, state and federal government units in 1939. The larger companies in the state paid from 18 to 22 per cent of their gross earnings in taxes."

He added:

"Companies have been made tax collection agencies, for the users of gas, electric and transportation services really pay this aggregate sum in hidden taxes in their monthly bills. Taxes can be reduced by greater economy in government operations."

Pituitary Gland Helps to Keep Body Running Smoothly

Madison—"The pituitary gland is small in size, but mighty in power," the state medical society stated in a health bulletin today.

"Our body is made up of cells, tissues, and glands, all properly balanced. Each of these divisions has a separate part to play in the normal individual. The glands, located in different parts of the body, help to maintain the fine balance. Too much activity of one gland or too little activity of another may upset the delicate machinery. Something goes wrong and we are no longer 'normal.'

"Within the brain, there is a gland, small in size, but mighty in power, called the pituitary. It is neatly tucked away within a socket or wall of bone, amply protected as befits its importance. The pituitary gland manufacturers several extracts, or hormones, that are absorbed by the blood stream and exert their actions upon other parts of the body.

Extract Substances

"Biologists have divided the pituitary gland into several parts and from each part have been extracted substances which help to keep the human machine working smoothly. The more biologists have searched, the more they have sifted and sorted out the various extracts manufactured by this little gland. It regulates and is responsible for the growth of the body; it is responsible for the development of the reproductive organs; it also exerts its influence upon the thyroid gland, it exerts its influence upon the adrenal glands, those little glands that lie near the kidneys and give us our sense of well-being, our energy. This little pituitary section is responsible for the production of milk in animals and nursing mothers. And again—more recent investigations have brought to light the knowledge that this little gland influences the circulation of sugar and fats in the blood, and thus may be instrumental in the causation of true diabetes.

"More research is being done today upon the pituitary gland than upon any other organ of the body. The study of cancer is the only other medical problem which compares in its scope of research with that of the study of the pituitary gland. It holds the laboratory spotlight and may some day reveal real rays of hope upon afflictions about which we are now in the dark."

Clapper Sees Wagner Act as Major Domestic Controversy

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Obviously one of the large domestic controversies for some time to come will concern revision of the Wagner National Labor Relations act The average person will do well to approach the whole question with suspended judgment.

We begin by knowing that the act and its administration to date have satisfied neither employers nor employes. Complaint from employers alone might be subject to heavy discount. But William Green and John Lewis are screaming, too. Since the act was put through for the benefit of labor—to protect labor against rough stuff by employers—it becomes difficult for even the strongest friends of the act to shut their eyes to the possibility that the law may be something less than perfect.

Clapper

The whole controversy involves complex procedures, and intense emotions among both employers and labor. And in this campaign year congress approaches the matter with an eye to votes and campaign contributions.

Dozens of questions are raised, many of greatest importance. One which strikes at a vital spot concerns the Smith committee's recommendation—opposed by the minority—that the law be amended to insure to employers the right to discuss matters more freely with their employes.

To guard against attempts by employers to intimidate their men, the Wagner act made it an unfair labor practice for an employer "to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employes' in their right of self-organization and collective bargaining.

That has been construed in ridiculous extremes in some cases. I know of one employer who placed on the bulletin board in his offices a statement of the concern's attitude regarding wage contract negotiations then in progress. The purpose was to correct any erroneous impressions that might be in the minds of employes who were not members of the negotiating committee Yet he was hauled before the labor board administration and warned about trying to interfere with his employes

Feel Act Doesn't Guarantee Free Speech

William Green cites a case in which this provision was invoked to crack down on a sub-foreman, an A. F. of L. member, who as a union member had a right to talk with other union members. But he made the mistake of talking to a C I O. member, who turned him in as a coercer The sub-foreman had called John Lewis a "dictator." The C I O. contended that this remark by the sub-foreman, although a union man, constituted an attempt by an employer to interfere with free collective bargaining by his employes The complaint was upheld by the labor board

So both Green and most employers feel that the labor act does not sufficiently guarantee free speech concerning industrial relations. The Smith committee has recommended adding a clarifying amendment to provide that nothing in the act shall be interpreted as prohibiting any expressions of opinion regarding matters which may be of interest to employes or to the public, provided that such expressions of opinion are not accompanied by acts or threats of discrimination intimidation or coercion

However some defenders of the act feel this would start the way for abuses, although it only serves to protect the right of free speech. The minority members of the Smith committee, Reps Healey and Murdock, say that it is a thinly disguised scheme to permit use of the economic weight of the employer to interfere with the free exercise of the right of self-organization. It would seem that with all the restrictions now played upon an employer, he could safely be allowed to talk By this time labor should be tough enough to risk allowing the employer his say, since the boss couldn't do anything but talk anyway.

That indicates the kind of controversy that may be expected throughout the discussion of amendments, and it isn't going to be an easy period Unquestionably the labor act, while giving employes long-overdue protection in the right to organize, has at the same time built a wall between employer and employe which, in the long run, is not to the good For in addition to the questions of wages and hours, efficient production is of importance to labor in the ultimate analysis—and that requires collaboration between management and employes, and a friendly working atmosphere.

Representatives in Congress Seek WPA Aid for Grignon Home

Kaukauna — Wisconsin representatives in congress have written Mayor L. F Nelson expressing their willingness to cooperate in securing approval of a WPA grant for restoration of the Grignon home.

Congressmen Joshua L Johns and Senators Alexander Wiley and Robert LaFollette report the request is being considered by WPA officials Johns said he had taken the matter up with the WPA administration head, urging prompt attention so that the property would be restored in time for Kaukauna's 150th anniversary celebration this year.

The Kaukauna office of the Appleton Post-Crescent is located in the Jules Mertes barbershop on Wisconsin avenue. William Dowling is the correspondent in charge and the telephone number is 107. Subscribers may call this number until 6:30 in the evening if their papers were not delivered.

City Offers Paper Mill Sale Contract to Chicago Company

Kaukauna — Sale of the city's Outagamie paper mill property to Sangamon Paper Grading company of Chicago will bring the city $4,000 cash, under the terms of a contract to be sent to company officials for approval. If the company approves the contract before the March 19 council meeting a special meeting probably will be called to enable the firm to start operations immediately.

Under the agreement the property goes on the city tax books at an assessment of $50 000, meaning a tax levy of about $1,350 a year. The new concern is to furnish a bond stating it will operate the plant as a paper mill, and that any sale must be to a concern which will carry on the same work.

Samuel J. Cohen, secretary-treasurer of the Chicago company, has told city officials his firm will take over the building as soon as the deal is completed. To be manufactured will be a No. 2 kraft wrapping paper, from waste kraft paper collected from paper box factories.

Labor Preference

Residents of Kaukauna, where qualified, are to be given preference in the matter of employment. The mill's equipment has been given a check by an engineer of the company, who reports the two machines have a present capacity of 31 tons of paper per day. Production is to be increased to 47 tons when the machines have been repaired.

The Sangamon company had previously submitted a written proposition to aldermen and utility commission members, which had been rejected Signing of the contract will end many efforts by the city to dispose of the mill, acquired in the summer of 1937 for back taxes and a small additional sum.

Mercury Falls to 10 Above Zero in City This Morning

Raw Wind Sweeps Appleton and Vicinity; 22 Above at Noon

Winter, which last week softened enough to induce thoughts of spring, whipped in a brisk punch today. The thermometer fell to 10 above zero at 6 o'clock this morning in the city and a raw, stinging wind blew throughout the day.

The weather man forecast that stormy conditions in western Colorado and some of the plains states probably would bring light snow to the Great Lakes region tomorrow. A few flakes drifted down on the city this morning.

Forecaster A. J. Knarr of Chicago reported today that temperatures generally in the middle west were below normal, but that he expected no appreciable change.

The Milwaukee bureau's forecast for Wisconsin read: "Partly cloudy, not quite so cold in north and south-central tonight; Tuesday cloudy, occasional light snow in southwest and extreme south."

The thermometer atop the Post-Crescent registered 22 above zero at noon today, indicating that it had climbed at an average rate of two degrees an hour this morning.

Yesterday's maximum reading was 26 above, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the Wisconsin Michigan Power company plant reported. Although the wind was chilling, Sunday's weather was pleasant enough to prompt a general migration to family cars for the afternoon.

Phoeniz, Ariz., with 81, and Park Falls, Wis., with nine below zero, turned in the highest and lowest readings in the nation Sunday, the Associated Press reported.

Powers Maneuver For Positions as Finns Await Help

have sent the greater assistance needed excepting for the refusal of neutral Sweden to allow organized allied troops to pass through her territory, this being the only feasible route to Finland. The Anglo-French reasons for wanting continuance of the war are several:

1. They wish to open up a new battle front in the Baltic area so they can strike at Hitler from the north.

2 They want to keep Russia engaged so that the reds can't assist Germany with supplies.

3. They would like to defeat the bolshevists at the same time as Germany, to remove the threat of communist expansion westward in Europe, down through the Balkans and into the Near East and India.

4. Abandonment of Finland to the mercies of the reds would have a bad effect on the small European neutrals, who might swing toward Hitler. Already the Balkans are very nervous.

Germany—Herr Hitler naturally wishes to prevent the establishment of a new allied front in the Baltic zone—a grave threat to him. He wants to release Russia, to get badly-needed supplies from that country. He must keep the Baltic sea free so he can continue to receive his vital iron ore from Sweden.

Dislikes Red Gains

And when all's said and done, he dislikes as much as anyone else to see the spread of bolshevist influence westward. That was something he didn't figure on when he signed up with the Muscovites.

Becsause of all these things Hitler has initiated the peace move, using the good offices of Sweden as messenger. At the same time he rushed Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop off to Rome to see both Mussolini and, to the amazement of the world, Pope Pius. The visit to Il duce was quite understandable, since Hitler would want to determine where his partner in the Berlin-Rome axis stood in view of developments.

The reason for the Vatican visit isn't so obvious. It is likely, however, that the fuehrer is getting anxious about the bitter feeling he has caused among catholics by his attempts to regiment the church in Germany. These are days when he needs his entire population behind him. A crack in public morale might be disastrous. One suspects that he is making a gesture of appeasement.

Mussolini's Position

Italy—Mussolini would like to see the Finnish war terminated. His wish all along has been that the conflict between Hitler and the allies might be confined to them alone. There is no indication that il duce intends to abandon his non-belligerency.

Sweden—Has been anxious for Finland to win, or secure an honorable peace, fearing that a bolshevist victory would menace all the rest of Scandinavia. However, threats from Germany have kept Sweden and Norway neutral. Allied intervention undoubtedly would drag them into the war on the side of England and France. Most certainly they are hoping that Finland can get a good peace, to obviate the prospects of allied intervention.

Move to Abolish Town Is Blocked

Attorney General Rules Adversely on Shawano County Plan

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—A plan of the Shawano county board to abolish the township of Bartelme in Shawano county apparently got a setback today in an opinion by Attorney General John E. Martin.

Martin ruled that the township cannot be dissolved without a vote of the electors, and that, moreover, neither the county board or the legislature is authorized to attach an adjacent rural area to an existing village.

Martin's opinion and interpretation of the statutes and Wisconsin constitution was sent to District Attorney James Larson, who reported that the proposed dissolution of the township was to come before the March session of the county board for action.

County officials, he advised Martin, want to divide the present area of Bartelme township between the neighboring townships of Almon and Seneca, and to attach the remainder of the area to the adjacent village of Bowler.

Martin advised that the board cannot act until the electors of the township approve, and that the legislature may subsequently change such action.

However, the legislature has no authority under the constitution to enact a law annexing adjacent rural territory to a village. Larson reported that the county board had considered asking the 1941 legislature to approve the annexation proposal.

The township of Bartelme, it was pointed out, includes a considerable Indian population.

West Allis Man Is Indicted for Murder in Iowa

Escaped Inmate of Reformatory Had Committed Appleton Burglary

Carroll Berres, West Allis, an escaped inmate of the Wisconsin State reformatory has been indicted on a charge of first degree murder at Waukon, Ia., in the fatal shooting of Night Marshal Elmer Lennon at Postville, Ia., last Nov. 9.

The man, following his arrest, had confessed burglarizing the Ebert Service station, 1218 N. Badger avenue, Appleton, on Oct. 31. He escaped after he was slightly wounded when shot by the owner who discovered him in the building. Struck by shotgun pellets, Berres, escaped when the station operator went to get help.

Berres, brought to Waukon from the Anamosa State reformatory hospital, was taken before the grand jury on a stretcher Saturday, and the indictment was returned Saturday night.

He was arrested at Lansing, Ia., a few hours after the shooting of Lennon, his right leg shattered by a bullet which authorities said had been fired by the marshal.

Poisoning Suspect Will be Examined

Kenosha—(AP)—A 22-year-old man suspected of having planned to poison his parents probably will undergo a sanity examination today.

County Judge R. V. Baker named Drs. C. G. Richards and C. E. Pechous to conduct the examination.

District Attorney John P. McEvoy said that if the youth were found sane, he would issue a warrant charging attempted murder.

The suspect, McEvoy related, told the hired man on his parents' farm about his plans, and the hired man aided county officials in setting a trap. The "poison" which the youth purchased was a harmless substance sold him by a druggist who also co-operated with authorities, the district attorney said.

Waupaca — County Clerk L. J. Steiger has started a new procedure —billing neighboring counties with their portion, pro rated, of the cost of maintenance of school districts which a portion is in this county and the rest in neighboring counties. The largest ward in the city of New London, the Third, is in Outagamie county, so that county has been billed for $1,097.25 for the school located in Hortonia.

Portage was billed $191.45 for portions of school districts overlapping three in this county: Farmington-Lanark; Scandinavia-Amherst Joint 2 and Scandinavia-Amherst Joint 4.

Waushara county was billed $119.30 for a school in Dayton-Springwater and the Lind-Dayton-Saxeville school.

Shawano county was billed $78.98 for three school districts which over-lapped: Larrabee-Pells; Matteson-Navarino and Marion-Dupont-Grant.

In return, bills have been received from Outagamie county for $186.75 for the Dale-Caledonia; Hortonia-Mukwa and the Hortonia-Caledonia schools. From Shawano county comes a bill for $111.47 for Grant-Dupont Joint 2 and Grant-Dupont Joint 4 schools.

During the last week the chairman of the town of Farmington asked County Clerk Steiger for a comparison of money raised by his township previous to his term with what had since been raised. In 1938 the total county property tax raised by Farmington was $17,678.73 while in 1939 it was $17,361.97 or a difference of $316.76.

400 are Present At 8th District V. F. W. Meeting

Commander Lewis, Other State Officials Attend Sessions

An estimated 400 members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and auxiliaries attended an Eighth district conference in Appleton over the weekend, climaxing it with a banquet at the Eagles hall last night.

E. A. Lewis, Manitowoc, state department commander, congratulated the district on the turnout and spoke optimistically of V. F. W. membership figures when he was introduced at last night's banquet by John F. Macco, Green Bay, district commander, who presided.

He and other state, district, and local V. F. W. officials were introduced from the speaker's table over which hung a banner inviting the veterans organization to hold its state encampment in Appleton in 1941. Mayor John Goodland, Jr., extended an official invitation to the veterans to select this city for the state-wide meeting.

Lewis and other state department V. F. W. executives attended a council of administration meeting Saturday afternoon in the Conway hotel at which the program for the state encampment at Sheboygan June 20-23 was approved.

The council went on record favoring enlargement of the Wisconsin Veterans Home near Waupaca and tightening of the federal regulation giving veterans preference on WPA work.

10 Districts Represented

All of the 10 districts of the state were represented at the conference, which opened with a school of instruction Sunday morning in the city hall for post adjutants, quartermasters, service officers and historians.

Speakers included Edward J. Schmidt, Manitowoc, department adjutant-quartermaster; A. R. Freeman, Milwaukee, department service officer; and Joseph J. Clerf, Grimms, department historian.

The principal business conference was held Sunday afternoon. Among the men who appeared on the program were Commander Lewis; Les Myers of Green Bay, a member of the national V. F. W. council; Lyall T. Beggs, Madison, junior vice commander; Armin B. Scheurle, Appleton, senior vice commander; Amos K. Adamek, Green Bay, department ritualistic director; and Werner N. Schomaker, Marinette, publicity director. Macco presided.

The auxiliary held a business meeting in the afternoon at Eagles hall. Mrs. Katherine Sloan, Oshkosh, state auxiliary president, attended last night's banquet and spoke briefly.

Commander Ernest K. Mueller of the Appleton post was men's chairman for the conference and Mrs. Carl Rehfeldt, president of the Harvey Pierre post auxiliary, was women's chairman.

Manawa Is Facing Shortage of Homes

Manawa — Manawa is experiencing a house shortage. For a number of years persons coming into this village have had difficulties in renting homes and the situation is becoming more acute each day now that plans are underway for the beginning of work on the waterworks project.

As many as 150 men are expected to be employed here at various times during the next two years and numerous families are planning to reside in Manawa while operations are underway. However, there just aren't any homes available and persons seeking temporary quarters will encounter difficulties.

Mr. and Mrs. Idrys Williams and their 6-year-old son, Robert, the former a salesman at Webb Auto Sales, have solved their house problems for the present, at least. They have moved a house trailer to the lot behind the auto sales building and are living comfortably in their four-wheeled residence. The couple hopes that the present quarters will be only temporary, however, and that the family may move into a more permanent location later.

Johnson Terms Public Debt A Distribution of Poverty

Editor's Note: During Westbrook Pegler's vacation, the daily column by Hugh S. Johnson will be substituted in the Post-Crescent.

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C.—Suppose it were true, as this administration says, that, as all governmental debt has gone up by an indefinite amount—above 20 billions—private debt has gone down by an equal amount. It isn't true, but if it were true, what? Would that mean the well-known "more abundant life" the "sharing of our wealth," "taking away from the 'haves' to give to the 'have-nots'," or a "more equal distribution of benefits"?

Johnson

It means just the reverse of all that. It means a more equal distribution of poverty, a sharing of our debits rather than our credits, a greater burden on the have-nots and a restriction of abundance in everybody's life. The whole nation, rich and poor alike, is responsible for the public debt—every wage, income, pension and piece of property of any kind is in hock for it. It can be retired only by taxes or default. The former is a burden on every family budget in the nation—including the unfortunates on relief or on the dole. The latter is catastrophe bearing with equal disaster on the whole population.

The poisonous doctrine that only the rich pay has been exposed over and over again. The poorest income in the United States is at least 20 per cent less large than it would be without the evil breed of hidden taxes that are carried on the average, in the cost of all articles consumed.

Private debt is contracted by individuals of their own free will and presumably always for some benefit received—usually for some purchase of property which is held and is of value more or less in excess of the debt. To the extent that this is so, it more than cancels out the debt so far as the wealth of the debtor is concerned.

But the public debt is the reverse of this at every point. The individual is not consulted about incurring it. Politicians do that for him. He gets for it in return nothing that he can call his own. While he frequently receives some social benefit for it, it is nothing that he can use to offset or repay his share of the debt. It is a mortgage on his future, on everything he has, or expects to earn. Although he may not be able to pass on a stiver to offset it for his children, if it remains at his death, they can't escape it—neither they nor their children—from now on.

Increased Private Debt Is Sign of Good Business

In view of these inescapable facts, a government which announces as an aim the distribution of happiness does ill to boast that it has replaced private debt with public debt. That isn't distributing happiness, it is distributing misery.

The bulk of business is one not for cash, but for credits. As others have pointed out, increasing private debt is a certain index of increasing business activity, prosperity and employment. Sharp reduction of private debt screams aloud that business and employment are declining. Much of our reecnt reduction has been through bankruptcy, to the benefit of nobody.

On the other hand, increasing public debt especially in such great amounts as we have recently seen, is an index of declining prosperity and employment. To boast about decreasing private debt and increasing public debt as an index of good government is about as logical as the fire department pointing to the increase of burnt buildings as a sign of its efficiency.

It is really worse than that. It indicates not only a lack of good government, by the very fact of the boastings, it advertises so complete a lack of knowledge of what good government is that the most certain sure-fire symtoms of bad government are paraded as proof of good administration. If that isn't wacky, what is?

"SPEED for bob-sledding thrills!
S-L-O-W BURNING for smoking thrills!"
says champion "Bucky" Wells

THEY'RE OFF—on the mile-long Mt. Van Hoevenberg run at Lake Placid, N. Y. with "Bucky" Wells driving. Fifteen breath-taking turns to go. Fifteen chances to taste the supreme thrills of speed. But in smoking it's different. "It's slow burning that makes a cigarette tick with me," "Bucky" says. And he means what he says, because he's smoked slow-burning Camels for ten years.

"ONE-TWO-BOB! ONE-TWO-BOB!" As the crew bobs, "Bucky" picks up speed . . . 60—70—80 miles an hour, driving high on the wall of ice as he swings the quarter-ton steel sled around the curve. But in cigarettes, this daring speedster gives the laurels to slow-burning Camels. You can tell by their mild, mellow taste that Camels burn cooler, slower—and scientists have confirmed this: Camels burned slowest of all in recent tests. (See panel below.)

Smokers:
SAVE THE COST OF THE STATE CIGARETTE TAX
Smokers who live in communities where certain state cigarette taxes are in effect can save the cost of the tax—and, in some instances, more—through smoking Camels. (See panel at right.) When you are a Camel smoker, you get this unique economy—and all the extra enjoyment of cooler, milder smoking—the fragrance and delicate taste of finer, more costly tobaccos.

In recent laboratory tests, CAMELS burned 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them. That means, on the average, a smoking plus equal to

IF you want to know how it feels to go 80 miles an hour on a racing bob-sled, "Bucky" Wells of Keene Valley, N. Y. can tell you. But when it comes to cigarettes, "Bucky" Wells is on the slow side . . . the slow-burning side. That means Camels!

"I know that Camels burn slower," "Bucky" says. "There's cool comfort in a slow-burning Camel. Mildness—more flavor. Every puff is a fresh treat to the taste, and—get this—there are many more puffs to enjoy in a Camel. Slow burning means extra smoking. 'I'd walk a mile for a . . . .'"

Even if a gust of wind did carry away "Bucky's" last word, not many people would fail to realize it was C-A-M-E-L. Camels are made from costlier tobaccos—drawn from the greatest treasure of mellowed tobaccos ever brought together in one place in the whole world.

WE'RE SATISFIED AND DOING WELL

In spite of the fact that the Wisconsin program of experience rating in unemployment compensation administration is generally accounted as fair, sound, practical and economical, in spite of the fact that the responsibility of each employer for his own unemployment problem is a powerful incentive for an employment stabilization effort in each business and industrial establishment, despite the endorsement of industrial and labor leaders of the state of the present program, we are again hearing talk in the halls of congress about compelling the state to abandon the principles upon which the pioneer Wisconsin unemployment compensation fund was built.

These columns have often pointed out the advantages of the Wisconsin plan over others variously prescribed. Today's editorial, however, was written in support of the Wisconsin system by a representative group of our industrial leaders whose statements were filed with the committee on finance of the United States senate several months ago when legislation proposing to change the Wisconsin experience rating principle was being heard.

From dozens of letters written by prominent Wisconsin business spokesmen these excerpts are taken to show the attitude of Wisconsin business and industry on the question:

The Neenah Foundry Company: " . . . It has been to our best advantage to have experience ratings because we have stabilized our employment and have not had a single case of lay-offs. We believe that it is only through the medium of the experience rating that an employer can honestly be compensated for his efforts in trying to stabilize employment." . . .

The Whiting-Plover Paper Company, Stevens Point: "We have arranged to plan our production much more carefully than ever before in order to make employment more regular, and we have very definitely succeeded in accomplishing this."

Thilmany Pulp & Paper Company, Kaukauna: ". . . In order to conserve reserve funds and decrease the rate of contribution, it is our practice to arrange for transfer of employees between departments with the end in view of reducing layoffs to a minimum."

Brillion Iron Works, Inc., Brillion: "Experience rating, in general, is an incentive for every employer to improve his own working conditions, and there is no question but that it causes him to prevent or try to prevent unemployment.

Holt Lumber Company, Oconto: "In July, 1936, when unemployment-benefit payments started in Wisconsin, we immediately set up a more centralized employment-control, based upon the policy that it is better to prevent unemployment than to compensate it. The merit rating was the incentive, as was the desire to have our firm secure the reduced rate."

Edison Wood Products, Inc., New London: "Since this law became effective, we have gone out of our way to try and level out our production and in that way create steady employment for our employes."

Appleton Woolen Mills: "In centralizing our control of employment and production, we are able to know in slack times to whom employment should be given and how much, both in hours and in value. This provides a steadier income, averaging much higher than the spasmodic employment plus benefit payments."

There's the voice of Wisconsin business on the Wisconsin law. It sounds pretty convincing to us. Let's hope that it convinces congress.

WORKERS OF THE WORLD, COME ON, UNITE AGAIN

On frequent occasions we have adverted to the fact that the greatest and bloodiest conquerors, the most supreme autocrats, have almost constantly asserted their liberalism and declared their wars were somehow instituted to liberate the human race from bondage.

Napoleon was as straight faced in declaring himself the protector of the workers as Stalin. And their records seem to be running about parallel.

Herr Hitler will not surrender so easily the championship of the humble. His leader of the Nazi Labor Front, Robert Ley, delivered a ringing appeal to the horny-handed sons of toil in all lands to unite in order to smash capitalism. And like a certain person who wore horns he figuratively took the workers to a mountain top and pointed out the treasures of the earth which he promised them in order to spur on their hot blood against the democracies which "withhold from you the riches of the world."

Alas, this argument sometimes gains many adherents who little realize that such riches as do exist will be dissipated in the ensuing struggle and that those gained through unexpected successes will never find their way to the calloused hands of the working man.

We have no doubt that Attila the Hun made the same sort of an address to his men. Certainly Genghis Khan did. So did Captain Kidd and every other pirate that sailed the Spanish Main.

But there is plentiful evidence that the workers are becoming wise to the heartlessness of their pretended friends. Certainly no one was able to fool the workers up in Finland.

SIDE TRACKING THE GREAT

Reading the first public speech of Justice Murphy since his elevation to the nation's highest court will likely provoke interesting queries concerning the happiness in certain political centers described as "a little left of center" at having such a pillar of integrity out of their way.

It is not merely that his successor started courting the shiftless and talkative rabble with immunity from prosecution but Murphy's political future was well nigh assured despite his defeat in Michigan and because the public were slowly coming to realize that here was a true piece of granite in faith, tolerance and ability which would likely expose the bogus pieces even as a paste diamond turns dull when placed along side the genuine.

Speaking before the New York University Law School Justice Murphy said that he regarded democracy's greatest menace to be "a tendency to seek a scapegoat in a religious or national or political or economical group" every time something unfortunate happened whether in the nature of a depression or otherwise. It is a fact that in days gone by rulers looked for someone to punish whenever a ruinous storm brought havoc to the crops of their subjects. And many a man has had his tongue cut out on a public platform when accused of being the cause of some epidemic that had spread swiftly.

We need not pretend to be so highly civilized in comparison to those who lived in the Dark Ages and practiced tortures on some poor scapegoat in order to get applause from the multitude. Witchcraft and Medicine Men are still with us even if in a subdued form.

In our own day as pointed out by the speaker successful dictatorship depends for its creation upon originating an entirely satisfactory scapegoat and without such an animal demagogues simply cannot march to power.

Justice Murphy stressed the proposition that all men cannot be considered equal in creation under the life giving principle of this nation, so long as extreme doubt exists concerning the availability at all times to all groups of the priceless treasure enumerated in the Bill of Rights. Great danger, the speaker insisted, exists in cultivating the feeling among the American people "that our national troubles are attributed to one group or another of the population." That, as a people, we have made great blunders none of us should deny. But we made them honestly for the most part, deliberately, thinking we were doing right, hoping to benefit the world as well as ourselves.

We should aspire at least to develop a certain discernment in respect to these blunders so that, having once erred, we may steer clear of similar errors in the future.

Out of the Murphy address we read a plea by the new Justice to his countrymen to approach the solution of their problems with as much respect for differing opinions as each craves from another and a general banishment of profligate talk, whether aimed at Jews or Baptists, Methodists, Mohammedans, Catholics, Tories or economic royalists.

A Verse for Today

By Anne Campbell

YOU WERE A FRIEND

Since we have talked as we used to do,
I have seen many a sun descend,
But I have never forgotten you,
For you were a friend when I needed a friend.

Our paths have twisted until they wind
Over and under the waning light.
Now you are one with the stars, designed
To shed over darkness a friendly light.

When the soft phrases of your loved hymn
Slid from the organ's expressive keys,
It was not strange that my eyes grew dim,
Thinking of your lost harmonies.

I will remember my whole life through
Heartache and trouble you sought to mend,
Treasuring always the thought of you,
For you were a friend when I needed a friend!

IT'S STILL A RACKET

The Chicago board of health has decided that the health and well being of Chicago citizens will not be endangered if a distributor is allowed to fill paper milk containers at a bottling plant within the city. True, Chicagoans will not be allowed to buy the milk. It will be delivered in the suburbs. But the subversive paper container is actually being allowed to pass the city limits.

Meanwhile the evasion and delay in authorizing the sale of milk in paper containers within the city is continued. The board of health sat on the lid as long as it was able. The corporation counsel sat on it in turn until he was smoked out. Now the city council is withholding action. The excuse given for the council's failure—which is that the aldermen are waiting to see what the federal court will do with a lawsuit seeking to force official acceptance of the containers—is trivial and immaterial. The council has power to act at any time that it chooses, regardless of what the federal court may do, and its subterfuge isn't fooling any one.

If the paper milk container never saves Chicago milk consumers a single penny it still will have done them a great service. The milk industry in Chicago has been a racket for years, maintained by a combination of violence and official connivance. It is still a racket, and the consumers and the dairy farmers are still the victims. The pharisaical argument that paper containers may menace public health is a false front for the real opposition, which is based on the fact that they threaten an outmoded and extravagant distribution system.—Chicago Tribune.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington—Most tragic joke played by fate on anyone during the last ten years probably is on the little band of Roosevelt-haters who became British subjects and moved to Nassau to escape the New Deal.

There was no income tax in the British Bahamas, practically no property tax, no SEC restrictions on stock market trading. Americans moving to Nassau merely had to live there six months of the year to escape every penny of New Deal taxation. They could cable their orders to the New York Stock Exchange, blissfully ignore the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Holding Corporation Act and all the regulatory curbs which the New Deal has placed upon big business.

Furthermore, while taking out British citizenship, they could commute—one hour and a half by air—to Miami and Palm Beach, and they could spend their summers in Newport or Saratoga.

But now, almost overnight, war has destroyed their blissful paradise. Now they are subjected to all the wartime hazards and penalties of any British subject.

RE-ELECT ROOSEVELT??

Last week a crowd of these "nouveaux" British crowded around L. W. (Chip) Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, at the Bahamian Club, wailing bitterly.

"What are we going to do?" they cried. "We had saved up enough to last us all our lives, but now the British government is taking up all our American securities, and giving us depreciated English government bonds in return."

(They referred to the fact that Great Britain, in order to secure cash to pay for war purchases in the United States, is requiring all British subjects to surrender their American stocks and bonds. Naturally, American citizens moving to the Bahamas hold more American securities than the average Britisher, so are hit hardest.)

"Besides," complained another new British subject, "we're likely to be drafted. If this war lasts long enough we'll all be in the British army fighting against Hitler."

"If I could vote back in Connecticut now," moaned another, "I think I would vote for Roosevelt. He's doing his best to stop this war. And if this war continues we're going to be ruined."

"Is Roosevelt going to run for a third term, Chip?" came another question. "If he can stop this war, I hope he gets re-elected."

"But just suppose," wailed the last one, "that Roosevelt stays in the White House for four more years and this war continues just the same!"

Note—That evening, Chip Robert, trying his fortunes on the roulette wheels of the Bahamian Club, won $897. "Just New Deal luck," lamented the new British subjects who watched him.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Senator Styles Bridges is the travelingest of all the White House aspirants, covering more ground and making more speeches than any other candidate. But the rotund New Hampshire Republican has no illusions about his chances this year. He tells friends he is building up contacts and good will for the future. Only 43, he says he can bide his time. . . . Stanley High, magazine writer and one-time White House intimate, is campaigning for his father, the Rev. Frank High, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor in Nebraska and for many years state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league. . . . Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt, the best dressed politico in the country, has more than a dozen suits, which are always pressed after each wearing. His favorite color is light grey. . . . The Daily Republic, crusading Mitchell, S. D., newspaper, has rocked the state with charges that in 1938 Governor Harlan Bushfield attempted to put through a "deal" with the state highway commission to secure $40,000 for the Republican state campaign fund, by doubling the price of road building material. The paper backed up its sensational charges with a number of affidavits.

Braintruster Tommy Corcoran ran true to form even in his own marriage. He was late as usual.

Always overloaded with engagements, he is rarely on time. It is commonplace with him to fill an appointment an hour or two after the time fixed. His marriage was no exception; in fact, he was tardier than usual. The ceremony took place three weeks after the date originally planned.

Only inner circle intimates know it, but the braintruster and his beautiful sesretary, Peggy Dowd, had decided to get married the day after the president left on his Caribbean fishing cruise. But just then the battle broke over the selection of the trustees of the billion-dollar Associated Gas and Electric empire.

Storm center of this bitter row was Ben Cohen, Corcoran's teammate and the ace utility legalist of the inner circle. Cohen viewed the choice of John Hanes, former under secretary of the treasury who was being strongly backed by certain Wall street interests, as a direct challenge to the administration and its utility policies.

He opened a militant offensive against Hanes, and Corcoran rushed into the fray to help his side-kick. And shoulder-to-shoulder with both was Peggy, who readily agreed to postpone her marriage plans until the fight was over.

The battle raged through most of February. Finally, Hanes withdrew and three trustees acceptable to the administration were appointed. A new date, March 4, was fixed for the marriage. That day, at the hour when Tom, Peggy and their best man, Ben, were supposed to be at the church, the young Dominican priest who was to perform the ceremony was called to the phone.

"Father Joubert, this is Tom Corcoran. I'm in Washington."

"Yes, Tom. What is it, Associated again?"

"No, not this time, Father. We've been delayed by a last minute job, but we're all ready now and we'll be there in an hour and a half. Will that be all right with you?"

It was and so—three weeks and one hour and a half late—Tom Corcoran and Peggy Dowd finally were married.

Note—After their engagement last year, Peggy took over managing Corcoran's personal finances, allowed him only $2 a day for pocket money.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—Note to the Philadelphia man who hears the President has so far cracked up mentally and physically that his personal physician has taken up residence at the White House in order to be near him every moment:

Grover

Somebody's been kidding you.

Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, the President's doctor, has not taken up residence at the White House, and he's still bug-eyed, as he always has been, over the President's metabolism.

In short, he can't understand why the President's physical reactions are continuously normal for a man of his age, why his heart, his kidneys, or some of his other vital organs don't show some signs of weakness occasionally. But they don't. And the Presidency has a pretty bad record as a health-wrecker, too.

Feels His Years

Now Mr. Philadelphian, if somebody has told you that the President tires more easily as he enters his eighth year in the White House—that both his mental and physical snap are not so good as they were on March 4, 1933, then you'd be getting the McCoy about the President's health.

For he does feel the weight of his 59 years—probably not so much as the average man, but he does feel 'em. In truth, he himself felt the need of a vacation when he sailed for the Canal Zone a few weeks ago. He was pretty fagged out.

The President takes his physical and mental health seriously—particularly his mental alertness. He doesn't trust even the word of his doctor and the people around him on that score. He's got a personal test he's constantly applying to himself.

It's the Presidential press conference. The President regards that twice-a-week meeting with the best minds in capital journalism as his own private mental testing ground. His good natured banter with the reporters is often-times more than that.

Occasionally he's deliberately swapping verbal punches with the reporters just to assure himself he can take it—and dish it out—as fast as ever. Inevitably he's found out—and the reporters will agree with him—that he's not slipping.

A Cold But No Flu

On the physical side it is a fact that he's not quite the man he was when he entered the White House. Physical exertion tires him more quickly. He doesn't swim every day in the White House pool any more. Two, sometimes three, swims a week suffice.

Strangely enough, this cutting down on exercise is not making the President flabby. His weight's still within the 182-187 pounds it's been ever since he came to the White House.

For years the President has been susceptible to sinus colds in the winter. He had one this winter. That helped account for those circles under his eyes when he delivered his message to Congress early in January. But a few weeks later they were gone, along with the cold. And he didn't have the flu this winter, as did most of his fellow Washingtonians.

There are signs the President puts first things first more than he used to, letting the secondary burdens fall on other, younger shoulders. He doesn't take the more irksome White House stints as seriously as most people think he does.

Grandpa Roosevelt

In short, age is mellowing President Roosevelt faster than it's irking him. I have noticed that the President is taking a more fatherly attitude toward the newspapermen, the people around him, and in a broader sense, the country at large. It is almost a grandfatherly attitude. Leastways, he's handing out more grandfatherly advice these days, and fewer aggressive political uppercuts. And you almost reach the conclusion that he would rather not deal in uppercuts.

Anyway, Mr. Philadelphian, somebody's been needling you on the point of the President's health. The President begins his eighth year in the White House as chipper as a California blue jay.

Just a Step Behind the News

By Dave Boone

The Finns and Stalin are discussing peace, and you wouldn't be stretching things very far to say that the allies are afraid something will come of the idea. Those Finns have kept Joe too busy to even put "I hear you calling me" on the radio for Hitler as a request number.

A lot of folks think that Adolf has put pressure on Comrade Josef to come to terms with Finland and concentrate on the hunt for bigger game. There's rarely been a peace move which everybody, including the Finns, are so suspicious of.

Russia is said to be willing to give Finland guarantees. But who will guarantee Russia, and if it is Italy, who's going to guarantee Italy? In considering guarantees these days, a nation has got to make up its mind whether it wants the 12 for 50-cent type of guarantees or the nickel-straight kind.

The better moral climate is getting a terrific kick in the pants from the United States senate. It don't make a pretty picture to see some of those noisiest champions of sweetness and light trying their best to scuttle the Hatch bill.

It gives you a kind of sick feeling to watch the boys wriggling around in their efforts to make sure nothing to stop corruption in an election year gets any big help. They don't even want it to get the caution signal, let alone the stop sign.

Poultry raising in Texas is a $45,000,000-a-year business and the state ranks first in the nation in the production of turkeys.

HOME TO ROOST

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—The other day the Wisconsin representative of a national publication devoted to current affairs telephoned to ask for some background and biographical material on Gustave J. Keller, president of the Democratic Party Organization of Wisconsin, and leader of the pro Roosevelt slate of Democratic convention delegate candidates which will appear on the April ballot in Wisconsin. It served to illustrate how rapidly Keller has risen in the state political arena, and also the rapidity with which political leadership can be developed in Wisconsin.

Wyngaard

Two years ago Keller started his first serious work as a Democratic organization politician in his home county of Outagamie, where with a small handful of other Democrats he set up a county Democratic club. The original membership list counted ten names. He was chosen president of the club, and soon became statutory chairman of the county party organization.

ANTI-CARROLL

Describing himself as "a firm supporter of President Roosevelt and his policies, and a strong believer in the perpetuation of those policies", Keller immediately began to rub the wrong way with such regular Democratic party leaders as William D. Carroll, who about that time was chosen head of the Democratic state central committee, and nominally the superior of county Democratic chairmen. The friction between Keller and some kindred souls up in central Wisconsin with Carroll and his crowd soon blossomed into a full-blown rebellion against the "reactionaries" and "coalitionists", and a little later into a determination to take over the Democratic organization in the state from even the professedly loyal New Dealers, such as C. E. Broughton, through an active reorganization campaign on a Roosevelt platform.

APRIL PROOF

Today Keller stands at the head of a movement of unknown strength which is frankly dedicated to the defeat of the Democratic regulars in Wisconsin. Since his name will be in the news until April 4 at least, when the popular opinion of his revolt movement will be made known, it is pertinent to relate something about the man.

Swarthy and sober, with deep splashes of gray hair for his 40 years, Keller is a somewhat sonorous orator, with a natural liking for politics. His speech is that of the lawyer, and every part thereof. Inclined to be autocratic in his dealings with his party colleagues, he has gathered around him two kinds of Democrats, those who faithfully believe that Roosevelt is the greatest president the party has ever produced, and those who bear personal grudges against the older party leaders in Wisconsin for one reason or another, including the matter of patronage.

He comes from an Appleton family which has been prominent locally in Democratic party work for many years. His father, Gustave Keller, Sr., a leader in fraternal work, was Appleton postmaster under the Wilson administrations, and a brother, Hugo, is a former assistant U. S. district attorney. Educated in pre-medical work at Lawrence college and the University of Chicago, Keller's studies were interrupted by the war, in which he served as a lieutenant in the coast artillery corps. He finished law school at the University of Wisconsin in 1922, practiced continuously in Appleton.

FUTURE

If his movement to capture control of the state Democratic organization succeeds—and victory in the April delegate contest will be an important step in that direction—he may become a candidate for office, the governorship say, but he won't talk about that. And in the event of success for his rebellion against the Broughton, Carroll leadership, he will be heard making speeches along this line:

"I am a firm believer in the principle that governments must not only recognize but respect human rights, that every man is entitled to a right to work at a decent wage, that no one be allowed to go hungry or without shelter, and that it is the duty of the government to fittingly care for the old, the infirm, and the unfortunates."

Personal Health Talks

SOME BAD IN EVERYBODY

Four parts of carbon monoxide in ten thousand parts of air may be breathed for an hour or longer without apparent harm. Ten parts in ten thousand will cause headache and maybe slight nausea and vague mental uneasiness or confusion. Fifteen to twenty parts of carbon monoxide in ten thousand parts of air, breathed for only a few minutes, may overcome a victim. Odorless, tasteless, CO polluting the air of a shop, kitchen, office adjoining a garage, closed car with defective heater or leaky exhaust connections, bedroom or bathroom heated with portable heater, may create an obvious tragedy or an unsolved mystery. Irrational mental processes and behavior is one of the characteristic ways in which anoxia from any cause, especially carbon monoxide anoxia, manifests itself. There you have the makings of a mystery, and please don't ask for further collaboration—consult Rosenau's "Preventive Medicine and Hygiene" (Appleton-Century), Glaister's "Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology" (Wood) at the public library.

Breathing air containing more than 4 parts of monoxide in ten thousand will in four or five hours cause the blood to become 30 to 35 per cent saturated with monoxide. Breathing air containing 10 to 15 parts of CO in ten thousand for from a few minutes to 1½ hours cause 50 to 60 per cent saturation of the blood with monoxide.

When the blood is from 20 to 30 per cent saturated with monoxide the victim has definite symptoms—tightness across the forehead, some headache, flushing of the skin, and if he or she remains in the polluted air throbbing in the temples follows, severe headache, weakness, dimness of vision, nausea, dizziness, collapse.

There are so many sources of pollution of the air by monoxide these days that a small amount of CO is found in the blood of nearly every one—approximately 1.5 per cent saturation. Smokers, however, have a much higher CO blood (hemoglobin) saturation—a pipe smoker had 4 per cent CO saturation; a chain smoker of cigarettes had 4.3 per cent CO hemoglobin saturation. Maybe that helps to explain the remarkable behavior of dizzy dames.

Sixty-two of a hundred automobiles tested for CO as they came along the highway in Massachusetts were found to contain in the driver's compartment various concentrations of CO., ten of them enough to incapacitate a person who might breathe the polluted air for many minutes. Such slight gassing of drivers probably explains many otherwise unaccountable accidents. It is a good plan when traveling in any automotive vehicle in cold weather to open wide windows or doors at reasonable intervals. Or if one feels slight headache or giddiness or "car sickness" it is wise to get out of the car for a short rest and breather, instead of resorting to medicine of any kind.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sulfurous

Have you ever thought of getting after fruit growers who persist in treating certain drier fruits with the poisonous sulphur dioxide? Also certain molasses canners addicted to the same practice?

(S. M. J.)

Answer—Why not just pass up with products and select fruit or molasses that contains no sulphur dioxide? It is only because people are so easily sold inferior or questionable food so embalmed that growers and canners persist in that practice.

The Long Drought

For the past few weeks whenever I touch a metal pipe or faucet, hot or cold or even a brass fender or the edge of the table, I feel what I think is a slight electric shock. . . . (C.M.)

Answer—Yes, static developed in your body by friction over the floor when you move about, as one may develop a charge in a hard rubber comb by rubbing it on dry wool, fur etc. The phenomenon is most marked when the air is dry; and when the skin is very dry. This time of year the atmosphere indoors is usually dry as Sahara. I have a monograph on Humidifying—send 1½ cent stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for it. After a winter's sojourn in the great indoor desert the human hide is generally dry, harsh, rough, irritable and sallow, from lack of natural skin oil and moisture.

Physician Explains Influence of Church In Field of Medicine

New London—"The Influence of the Catholic Church in the Field of Medicine" was the subject of a talk by Dr. R. T. McCarty, Appleton, at a communion breakfast meeting of the Holy Name society of the Most Precious Blood church at the parish hall Sunday morning.

The speaker credited the present high standards of the medical profession to the influence of the church and traced the development of medical ethics, institutions of learning, nursing and hospitalization to the early efforts of its learned followers.

Religion, he said, has taught that man consists not only of body but also of soul and has impressed on the medical society its responsibility to protect the life created by and for the Almighty Being.

The Catholic church has never stood in the way of advancement of true science but fostered it while denouncing atheistic theories, he declared.

Public Morality Has Deteriorated, Lawrence Claims

Party Bickerings, Factional Politics Must Give Dictators Laugh

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington—Maybe Signor Mussolini and Herr Hitler are too busy these days to read the American newspapers but, if they do read them, they must be getting many a chuckle out of what is happening in the United States congress. For the picture of pressure groups fighting one another and public officials striving to prevent the passage of laws that would keep them from debauching public funds for their own selfish advantage is one that confirms in more respects than one the charges which the two fascist dictators have often levelled against democracy.

Lawrence

Here in the most powerful democracy in the world, the very bickerings of party and factional politics, which both Mussolini and Hitler have especially singled out for criticism as sapping the structure of the state, are growing rather than diminishing in intensity.

Between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 persons are unemployed, business moves uncertainly along under artificial stimulants either of domestic "pump priming" or war orders and yet the fundamental questions that disturb the national economy go untouched except for a superficial survey now and then. Each political party finds itself catering to the big group votes and individual members of congress bow in fear of group retaliation.

Take the labor question as an example. A law is passed nearly five years ago involving a sweeping change in employer-employe relations. It is urged that the law be given a chance to function. It is given such a chance. It is urged that the law and not the administrators are at fault. Congress with characteristic carelessness delegates broad powers, insists they will not be abused, and then, when the power is misused, is afraid to take the powers back. The labor factions which are the beneficiaries line up votes back home. Committee chairmen in congress respectively take their rigid positions. Each charges the other with bad motives and, in the end, the very chaotic condition, which shows democracy at its worst and gives fascism its excuse is produced, because the pressure groups are totalitarians at heart. The idea of objective statesmanship, of legislative broad-mindedness is gone.

Pressure Group Control

Pressure groups actually control the New Deal committees of congress body and soul. The old days of special privilege are imitated almost to the method and the technique.

Meanwhile serious friction grows, employer and employe relations are kept disturbed and the incapacity of democracy to correct its own errors is again demonstrated. Most of the trouble, of course, is that too many members of congress care less for their convictions, than for risk to their political careers. Little do they realize the risk is more imaginary than real, but they often lack the courage to make the test.

The matter of scheming to keep their jobs is best illustrated, however, in the struggle over legislation for so-called "purity" in politics. Senators brazenly attempt to fight such proposals and to use parliamentary tricks to defeat them largely because they know it may hurt their own campaigns for re-election. So accustomed have they become to using public funds and public offices for personal purposes that, before the very eyes of the whole country, they venture now to oppose any further restriction.

In a way these men on Capitol Hill cannot be blamed altogether. The deterioration in public morality in these last few years has been considerable. The New Deal came into power on the crest of a wave of liberalism which to many people meant idealism. It meant purity in governmental action, a fair deal for the underprivileged and at most a redistribution of wealth by sociological reform. Some of the measures passed have lived up to that objective, but some of them have added cancers to the economic life of the country which are much worse than the ills of yesteryears. Now notwithstanding these reform measures, there has become ingrained in the New Deal concept of government on Capitol Hill a philosophy that political selfishness is unavoidable and that the end always justifies the means.

No Prosecutions

The Hatch law was passed after public opinion was outraged by the scandalous use of the WPA machinery in elections But there have been no prosecutions under the Hatch law. A political department of justice will never prosecute anybody in its own political party. On top of this the AAA was used only last week for political purposes with the participation of the secretary of agriculture himself Everybody who wasn't born yesterday knows a political dinner when he reads how it was arranged. The "celebration" of the anniversary of the AAA fooled nobody.

Maybe the administration deserves votes from the farmers for giving them public funds when they needed help, but if democracy's only method of keeping its majorities is by furnishing subsidies and collecting votes for favors given, then it is only a question of time when the taxpayers who are really compelled to pay for these uneconomic schemes must ultimately welcome—even as did European peoples—the inevitable climax that puts an end to such undermining of the public credit.

In the interim, as democracy in America reveals itself full of political selfishness and unmorality, copies of the congressional record these days might well be barred from export to either Italy or Germany where they might give too much comfort to the fascists who have sneezed not only at Democracy's weaknesses and internal discords, but at the palpable spinelessness of democracy's legislators.

Majority of Americans Would Like to See Warring Nations at Peace Table With U. S.

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J.—When Sumner Welles gets back to Washington with his report on the chances of European peace, President Roosevelt will be faced with a series of momentous questions. Where does the public stand on a peace move at this time? Has the Welles mission won the public's approval? If Hitler and the Allies have left a door open to a genuine peace offer from the United States, should Mr. Roosevelt make further moves for reconciliation?

Dr. Gallup

Most important of all, perhaps, do the American people wish to participate in a peace conference, or have they been disillusioned by the results of the Versailles peace-making twenty-one years ago?

In view of the national and international importance of these questions the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted soundings in all parts of the United States which indicate the temper of American voters at this time. While the responsibilities of peace-making and treaty-framing will rest with the experts and diplomats when peace is finally reached, one factor which will have to be taken into account in any settlement is the attitude of the American public.

Here are the salient points in that attitude today as gained from the survey:

1. Even though the war in Western Europe is apparently far from a decision, the majority of Americans believe that an attempt should be made to end it now through an international conference. The Institute asked: "Do you think now is the right time for the leading nations of the world to have a conference to try to settle Europe's problems and end the war between Germany and England and France?" Fifty-eight per cent of those with opinions on the question answered "Yes"; forty-two per cent thought it was not the right time. This in itself is an indication of favorable sentiment for the Welles mission, since Mr. Welles was sent abroad specifically to learn whether a conference would have any chance at the present time.

2. Even more important as a revelation of the American mind, however, is the fact that a majority believe the United States should take part in such a conference if one is called. In answer to the question, "If such a conference is held, should the United States take part in it?" 55 per cent say "Yes"; 45 per cent say "No."

The public's attitude makes two additional points clear. From the political standpoint it appears that President Roosevelt has once more taken a popular step in launching the Welles peace mission. The president's foreign policy since the outbreak of war has, in fact, been one of the most consistently popular policies he has ever attemped. The public has approved the lifting of the arms embargo, clapping a cash-and-carry provision on sales to the belligerents, and lending money to Finland.

Secondly, it appears that although many Americans believe they would profit by an eventual war boom, the majority hope that the war can be brought to an end "There'll have to be a conference sooner or later; it might as well be now" . . . "Europe could make a better peace now than later" . . . "make peace now and prevent the war from starting in earnest" . . . these are the chief thoughts in the American voter's mind when he considers the question of war and peace today.

Will Hitler Make an Offer?

The whole question of a conference may be sprung on the world without much notice, of course, if Chancellor Hitler does as some observers expect him to do and offers the Allies a peace proposal before starting a spring offensive. Where would the American public stand in that case?

The survey shows that there is likely to be strong sentiment in the United States, in that event, for the Allies to sit down with Germany and earnestly examine the German proposition. Asked: "If Hitler offers to make peace this spring, do you think England and France should meet with the Germans and try to end the war?" 75 per cent of those with opinions on the question answer "Yes." Twenty-five per cent say "No."

This does not mean, of course, that the American people want a Hitler-dictated peace. On the contrary, they would probably consider the Allies perfectly justified in continuing the conflict if the alternative were a Nazi triumph. The vast majority of Americans have never sympathized with Hitler's claims to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, for instance, and in the present survey public sentiment is strongly opposed to letting Germany keep these territories.

"If peace could be reached by letting Germany keep Czecho-Slovakia," the Institute asked, "would you favor this?" But most Americans do not desire a peace at those terms. They replies were:

NO	62%
YES	38%

When a similar question was asked regarding Poland the vote was even greater:

NO	70%
YES	30%

As the most powerful neutral in the world, the United States may have a peculiarly good opportunity to influence the kind of peace settlement which eventually emerges when the war is over. Whether America takes part in the peace conference or not, her economic influence is bound to be great. That is one reason why the public opinion revealed in today's survey will not be ignored either in Washington or in the capitals of Europe.

The survey shows that the greatest support for an international peace conference at this time comes from members of President Roosevelt's own party, as does most of the support for American participation in such a conference But there seems to be little or no sign of the kind of partisan split which developed over Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations. More than half of the Republicans with opinions on the two questions approved the idea of a conference and approved of American participation.

Do you think now is the right time for the leading nations of the world to have a conference to try to settle Europe's problems and end the war between Germany and England and France?

YES	58%
NO	42%

If such a conference is held, should the United States take part in it?

YES	55%
NO	45%

It apparently makes little difference, either, whether an American lives in the East, West, North or South—insofar as his views on a peace conference go. Women, however, are more in favor of a peace conference than men, while men are more in favor of U. S. participation if such a conference is called than women are.

As in all sampling of public opinion, the figures quoted in today's survey are subject to a small error due to the size of the sample, i. e., the number of persons interviewed. In the present survey, however, assuming an accurate cross-section, the statistical probabilities are 95 in 100 that the figures quoted for the country as a whole would not vary more than 2 per cent if the whole voting population of 60,000,000 had been interviewed, and 997 in 1000 that the figure would not change more than 3 per cent. The normally expected range of error would be somewhat larger for the various sectional and party "breakdowns," of course, but again the probabilities are 95 in 100 that this error would not be greater than 5 per cent in any such "breakdown."

24 Exhibitors to Meet With Club Wednesday Night at Valley Inn

Neenah — The program for the Neenah Kiwanis club's fifth annual Twin City Home show will be mapped out at a dinner meeting of the committee, club members and exhibitors at 6:30 Wednesday evening at the Valley Inn, Richard Bell, chairman, announced today.

The dates for the annual home show, which will spread its annual message of home building, home owning and home furnishing and equipment in Neenah and Menasha, will be announced at the dinner meeting.

Guests of the club at the dinner meeting will be representatives of the 24 firms which already have contracted to exhibit their wares in the annual household exposition at the S. A. Cook Armory.

The names of the 24 exhibitors representing a cross section of every phase of home ownership and home improvement, also will be announced for the 1940 version of the Kiwanis club project.

Show Committee

The committee in charge of the show is composed of Bell, chairman; Ted Gilbert, vice chairman, Arthur Haselow, John O'Leary, Gaylord C. Loehning, Arnold Jacobs, Otto Steffenhagen, Elmer Schultheis and Henry Forbes.

Bell will announce other committee appointments for the exposition.

The chairman explained the purpose of the dinner meeting with the exhibitors. "The home show is sponsored by the Kiwanis club," he said, "for the community to focus attention on building and other phases of the home, and for the exhibitors so that they can point out their wares and aid in home building to the public. Because the home show is partly staged for the exhibitors, it has been decided that they will be given a part in helping to establish the policy of the 1940 home show."

At the meeting, the problems of admissions, awards and entertainment will be discussed.

Menasha Woman Is Director of Wild Life Stamp Sales

Mrs. F. J. Fitzgerald to Head Drive for Conservation Funds

Menasha—Mrs. F. J. Fitzgerald has been named Neenah-Menasha director for National Wild Life Restoration week, March 17-23, by C. J. Ballan, state director, it was announced this morning.

Mrs. Fitzgerald who is president of the Menasha Garden club, will handle distribution of the conservation stamps as part of her work of Twin City director. The 1940 Wild Life stamps are issued by the National Wild Life federation to finance conservation and will be on sale throughout Wisconsin. The stamps which come in sheets of 100 each, are colored replicas of flowers and wild life. Mrs. Fitzgerald is contacting local high schools, Women's clubs, Garden Clubs, Boy and Girl Scout troops as well as other organizations to sell the stamps. Any group or individual can procure stamps from Mrs. Fitzgerald, 649 Broad street.

Many stamp collectors, Mrs. Fitzgerald said, are preserving the stamp issues in the belief that they will increase in value in the future.

Goal Is $8,000

The stamps have been especially popular with children and are used in some schools to illustrate wild life work. Most of the stamps sold, Mrs. Fitzgerald pointed out, are used as stickers on envelopes during the Wild Life week. C. J. Ballan, director for the state, said that last year's Wisconsin stamp sale amounted to $5,260 and this year the federation expects to sell about $8,000 worth.

Funds obtained from the sale of stamps are used for state educational work as well as propagation and restoration of wild life. Wild Life poster stamps this year will be issued in sheets of 100, four blocks of 25 stamps, each block with a different key stamps. The 25 stamps include 10 upland game, song and insectivorous birds, five mammals, four fish, three wild flowers and two trees. Matched pages for the 1939 album may be secured also. Special radio programs and cooperation of newspapers will feature the Restoration Week observance, Mrs. Fitzgerald said.

Many Wisconsin Businesses Enjoy Reduced Assessments For Unemployment Benefits

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

Madison—More than a third of the Wisconsin employers under the unemployment compensation act are already enjoying reduced rates of contributions as the result of their favorable employment experience rating, the state unemployment compensation division disclosed today, as late figures showed total reserves in the accounts of more than 7,000 employers aggregating approximately $50,000,000.

Unemployed in Wisconsin have received almost $16,000,000 in benefits under the unemployment compensation act since payments began in 1936, and desite a subnormal drain of about $9,500,000 in 1938, the fund has received contributions in excess of withdrawals since it was established, Director Paul Raushenbush, reported.

Principally because the Wisconsin fund began receiving contributions 1½ years ahead of the systems in other states more than 2,800 employers have had their rate of payment reduced from 2.7 per cent to 1 per cent or less, it was shown.

Base Rate

The base rate of contribution under the state-federal insurance system is 3 per cent. Federal law, however, allows a 90 per cent offset for state contributions, which amounts to 2.7 per cent paid to the state.

As a result of the "experience rating" features of the Wisconsin law, which has been under attack in congress and elsewhere, Wisconsin employers are now saving several million dollars a year over what they would be forced to pay if allowances for individual employer records were not made in the statute, it was pointed out.

Under the Wisconsin system, each employer's contribution rate now depends on his own experience, as shown by the contribution and benefit record of his individual account, and as computed at the end of each calendar year. Industrial commission records prove that there are wide variations in employer experience, not only between industries, but also between different employers within the same industry.

Thus it is shown in a recent compilation that more than five per cent of all employers covered have already paid in a sufficient amount, and have maintained such stable conditions of employment in their establishments, as to be enabled to eliminate current payments entirely.

Contributions Cut

More than one third have been allowed to reduce their contributions to 1 per cent, while about half are still paying 2.7 per cent.

Moreover, a total of almost 10 per cent are paying more than the standard rate, or 3.2 per cent, because of their unfavorable employment experience rating.

The system can be illustrated further in its operation in a single industry. The paper and allied products industry, relatively stable in employment (most mills last year reported withdrawals of less than 10 per cent of their contributions) in 1939 had 66 units out of a total of 96 paying at the rate of 1 per cent.

Only 24 mills, or one fourth of the total, were contributing at the standard 2.7 per cent rate, two were paying 3.2 per cent, while two others had built up reserves adequate, with their employment experience rating, to eliminate further contributions entirely.

Thus is shown the variance in employment conditions in a specific industry, and the varying application of the unemployment compensation law as a result.

Although important liberalizations in unemployment insurance benefits and conditions are to become effective this year, state administrators are confident not only that the fund will remain solvent, but that the reserves will continue to grow for several years at least.

In the year just ended, for example, the fund paid out total benefits of $3,663,572, while at the same time it was receiving a total of $14,000,000. Although the increasing number of employers who are earning lower rates of contribution will lower the receipts in the years to come, the fact that in 1938, despite a tremendous drain on the fund by widespread unemployment, it was able to collect an amount almost double the total of withdrawals makes it certain that even greater liberalizations can be allowed under the present level of rates, according to Raushenbush.

An important change already effective—beginning in January—allows for a change in the waiting period. Previously the worker laid off from his job had to wait three weeks after the date of his dismissal for a benefit check.

On the second layoff, he was not required to wait, but began receiving benefits immediately.

2-Week Wait

The 1939 legislature provided for a two weeks waiting period on the first layoff, and a one week period on the second. Result will be, it is expected, greater benefits to the unemployed workers and greater costs to the fund, although the exact amount cannot yet be computed.

An even more significant liberalization applies to the duration of the benefit period. Under the old law, the worker was entitled to one week unemployment compensation to every four weeks of employment during the previous year. Thus if a person received a check of $15 a week in unemployment compensation—the maximum—and he had worked for 30 weeks, he would receive his $15 weekly check for seven and one half weeks.

Under the new law, he would get his check from the unemployment compensation division for 10 weeks. That change, and others favorable to the beneficiaries of the system, will become effective in April, according to Raushenbush.

Turkish Battlefront, Attempt To Force Dardanelles, Provided Top News Stories 25 Years Ago

BY VIOLA HELLERMANN

The Turkish battlefront, where nearly 30 French and English warships were shelling the Ottoman defenses in an attempt to break through the Dardanelles continued to make most of the front page World war news during the second week of March, 1915, although there was no let-up in the fighting on French and Polish battlefields

Reports published in Appleton's two daily newspapers 25 years ago this month informed their readers that the Russian Black Sea fleet was attempting to come to the aid of the French and British and that German artillerymen were manning the big Krupp guns that were replying to the allied fleet bombardment at the Dardanelles.

On March 9 it was reported that Smyrna was about to fall before Rear Admiral Pierce's fleet, as only three Turkish land batteries were replying to the fire of the British squadron. British occupation of Smyrna was expected to be the first decisive victory in the naval war against the sultan

Casualties Mount

The war casualty list, although the conflict was not yet a year old, was growing to horrible dimensions on the European battlefields

A dispatch from the war office at Berlin on March 4 admitted that 40,000 German troops narrowly escaped capture or annihilation by the Russians in fighting around Prysansez. "Only by the most desperate fighting and forced marching did the Germans extricate themselves from an extremely dangerous position," the communication stated

German gains in the fighting north of Arras around the Lorette hills were admitted in official French dispatches March 4, but four days later the official reports from Paris described what they called "a bloody engagement" in the Vosges mountains in which the French were victors

In a story from Berlin on March 5 it was claimed that German forces in Flanders and France had repelled a series of attacks delivered at many points from near the Ypres to the Vosges. "From positions in the Lorette hills that were captured from the French the Germans poured a hot fire into the British force that attempted to capture the lost ground," the story said. "The British retired, leaving many dead and wounded."

Germany was less successful that week on the sea. According to the British admiralty, she lost two submarines, the U-8 and the U-20. The first was sunk by French destroyers and the second by the British Aerial bringing the total number of submarines lost by Germany since the beginning of the war the previous July to seven

Turning their attention to a more distant battle field, Appleton readers, as well as the rest of the world, received during the first week of March, 1915, their first intimation of the seriousness of the Boer uprising against the British in South Africa. Some news of the rebellion had appeared during the early months of the war, but it was not till March that the British public and the world at large learned that 1,000 Boers had died in the revolt and that 10,000 were prisoners.

To the United States, however, the war was brought much closer by the price of wheat. On March 9 cash wheat sold on the Chicago board of trade for as high as $1.58 a bushel, an increase of 12¾ cents a bushel over the high price three days before that.

Angrily the Appleton Daily Post commented on the situation:

"To Yankee ingenuity and greed is due the grasping and holding of the wheat supply for speculation. If the same business cunning can prevent the Wilson administration from placing an embargo on wheat exports, the wheat speculators of this nation will be able to collect vast fortunes from the pockets of the poor in this country."

Also angry, but for a different reason, was George Bernard Shaw, the noted British playwright, who accused the British prime minister of deceiving his party and nation by preparing for war long before it came and concealing military and naval agreements with France against Germany.

Middle West Is Studying Issues And Candidates

Republicans Have No Favorite and Democrats Wait for Roosevelt

Kansas City —(AP)— Most of the agricultural midwest still is shopping around for personalities and issues to fit in the presidential picture.

Contrasted to four years ago when President Roosevelt and Alf M. Landon dominated the political scene, Republican sentiment in the farm-belt states has centered on no one candidate and Democrats are waiting for the Roosevelt third-term enigma to be unraveled.

Except for some general Republican criticism of the AAA farm program and some pot shots at the reciprocal trade treaty program, no particular agricultural issues have been drawn. Only in Iowa and Nebraska have farm problems played much part to date in pre-convention and primary campaign maneuvers.

Missouri is interested in a fight over "Pendergastism;" Kansas has been stirred by a Republican party fight over national convention delegates; Nebraska's April 9 primary will provide the first farm belt test between Republicans Thomas E. Dewey and Arthur H. Vandenberg; Iowa Democrats and Republicans are maneuvering for the June 3 primaries and have yet to call conventions to choose presidential delegates; Minnesota under a new law will have its primaries in June rather than September; no specific agricultural issues have crystallized in the Dakotas.

Republican presidential aspirants and emissaries have beaten a path to the door of Landon's Topeka home but he has given none of his nod of approval. Neither has he receded from his stand that he would not be a candidate. Some observers professed to see in his friendliness to Representative Joseph Martin of Massachusetts a possible indication of his preference.

Landon William Allen White, noted Kansas editor, and Governor Payne Ratner have joined in suggesting that the Kansas Republican delegation of 18 be instructed for Senator Arthur Capper, veteran Kansas political figure. This maneuver would give the delegation freedom of choice at Philadelphia. Landon is slated to head the group which will be completed April 4 at the state convention.

In Missouri Governor Lloyd C. Stark, who took a leading part in the fight against Kansas City's Pendergast machine, has asked an uninstructed Democratic delegation "friendly to Roosevelt." Democratic Senator Harry S Truman, whom Stark is attempting to unseat, surprised those following his close New Deal votes by opposing a third term for Roosevelt. Truman said, however, he would support Roosevelt if he were nominated. He was urged that the 30-vote delegation be instructed for Senator Bennett Champ Clark. The delegation will be chosen April 15 at St. Louis.

Missouri Republicans are talking of an uninstructed delegation to be chosen in district conventions and at a state convention April 26.

August Primaries

Neither Kansas or Missouri will have primaries until Aug. 6.

Nebraska's 14-member Republican delegation will be pledged to the winner of the April primary. President Roosevelt is unopposed on the Democratic ballot. Vice President Garner having declined to enter the preferential primary. Friends of Garner said he did not want to hurt Senator Edward R. Burke's chances of renomination.

Minnesota's Republican and Democratic leaders generally favor uninstructed delegations. Republicans will name their 22 delegates by May 23. Democrats haven't yet called their convention. In Democratic ranks there is some sentiment for a slate endorsed for President Roosevelt as first choice and Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D-Mont.) as second. There will be three parties in the field at the June primaries—Democrat, Republican and Farmer-Labor—to chose nominees for a full state ticket, nine congress seats and the senate seat held by Senator Henrik Shipstead, farm-Laborite.

Iowa's parties will nominate state and congressional tickets June 3. No senate seat is at stake.

Iowa Democratic leaders, including Senator Clyde L. Herring and State Chairman E. H. Birmingham, have expressed favor for a third term. An exception is Senator Guy M. Gillette, who had some New Deal opposition in the 1938 Democratic primary. He said he would not favor a third term even for his father, but added that he had never yet failed to suport party nominees. The Democrats have not summoned the convention to name their 22 delegates. There has been some talk of a first-ballot complimentary vote for Secretary Wallace or Herring.

Republican delegate activity in Iowa is confined generally to a fight on National Committeeman Harrison Spangler. In presidential discussions Dewey's name figures more prominently than others. The Republican convention has not yet been called.

Movieland
Its People and Products

By Jimmie Fidler

Hartford, Conn.— Dear Staff: I see by the papers that Hollywood is getting unwelcome headlines again—this time as the result of a narcotic investigation. Boiled down to its essentials, the story, of course, reflects no discredit on movie folk as a whole—it merely states that a comparatively unknown "Hollywood actress" has been questioned because she's dated a man believed to be a wholesale drug dealer.

Fidler

Unfortunately, when the story carries a Hollywod dateline and a scandalous implication, few readers bother to appraise essential facts. The name, "Hollywood," has come to mean, vaguely, the entire movie industry and everyone connected with pictures. The name of no other town carries such a sweeping connotation. If, for instance, you were to read that a Pittsburgh steel worker had been questioned about narcotic smuggling, you certainly would not attach stigma to either Pittsburgh or the steel industry. But—if you're an average movie-conscious American—you automatically take in the whole screen colony when you read that a "Hollywood actress" is being questioned. If the story implies that she is a drug addict, you instinctively suspect ALL picture workers— and the sensation-selling press aids your reaction by using a stock wind up: "It is possible that names of well-known Hollywood figures may be brought in." Presumably, the drug salesmen refuse to sell their wares to anyone unless he can show proof of studio employment.

It's all very unfair to Holly wood, which is a remarkably clean and law-abiding community. Of course, I'll have to admit that plenty of actors are dopes—but they get that way without resorting to narcotics.

St. Mary Parish in Tribute To Girl Scouts, Brownies at 28th Anniversary Services

ST. MARY parish which had the first Girl Scout troop, Brownie, pack and Boy Scout troop in Appleton, paid tribute to Girl Scouts and Brownies of the parish yesterday, in recognition of the twenty-eighth birthday anniversary of the national organization Girl Scouts, Brownies, leaders and troop committee members of the congregation attended the 7 30 mass and received holy communion in a body, after which they were guests of about 100 Holy Name society men at breakfast in Columbia hall

Also present at the breakfast were Miss Dorothy Petron, local director; Mrs. Basil McKenzie, Girl Scout commissioner; Mrs. E. C. Hilfert, Mrs. C. E. Mullen, members of the council The Rev. William Grace, pastor, gave the invocation, and Patrick J Heenan, president of Holy Name society, welcomed the guests and introduced the toastmaster, Dr. William J. Frawley.

Short talks were given by Father Grace, Dr. Frawley and Carl Van Dinter, a member of St. Mary Boy Scout troop committee.

Miss Petron, the principal speaker, discussed Girl Scouting, its program and possibilities. She stressed the fact that learning to work harmoniously in groups, enjoying work with the leader, learning to appreciate what is around one are all a part of the plan of good Girl Scouting. Girls learn to choose what is important to herself, thus laying the foundation for a worth while hobby and a background for adult life, she said.

Take Part in Program

Janice Garvey of Troop 1 read an article on the life of Juliette Low, founder of Girl Scouts 28 years ago, and Janet Schneider of Troop 21 explained the tenderfoot requirements. Doris Hoffman of Troop 1 told of the preparation to become a second class scout, and Charlotte Nemacheck of the same troop explained the 10 fields of interest for first class scouts.

Miss Patricia Ryan, leader of Brownie pack No. 1, explained the Brownie program, and the Brownies present gave their promise and repeated their laws. Members of the two scout troops gave their Girl Scout promise, laws and sang two typical scout songs.

A highlight of the program was the presentation of a huge birthday cake to the three groups of Girl Scouts in commemoration of the twenty-eighth anniversary of scouting. About 40 Boy Scouts who were present with their leader sang a song.

The full membership of the three Girl Scout units at St. Mary parish was present at the breakfast, including 19 members of Troop 1 with Mrs. Harry Koller as leader and Miss Margaret Walsh as assistant; 26 members of Troop 21 with Mrs. Robert Roemer as leader and Mrs. Roger La Berge a assistant; and Brownie pack members with Miss Ryan as leader and Miss Joan Mullen as assistant.

Committee Members

Troop committee members for the two Girl Scout troops are Mrs. Joseph Garvey, chairman; Mrs. Hugo Pankratz, assistant chairman; Mrs George Nemacheck, Mrs. John R. Riedl, Mrs Eugene Fountain, Mrs. Robert Maiz, Mrs. Walter Zwicker and Mrs Carl Peotter, and the Brownie pack troop committee consists of Mrs. Clifford Williams, chairman; Mrs. Walter Woods, Mrs. Glenn Carroll, Mrs. Charles Jaeger, Mrs. Albert St. Pierre, Mrs. Norbert Hoffman and Mrs. Richard Beelen.

Girl Scouts of Troop 2 of St. Joseph's church observed the opening of National Girl Scout week by receiving holy communion at the 9.15 mass Sunday morning at that church. The group, accompanied by the troop committee members and leader, was seated together in the front pews in the church. Forty scouts attended.

Troop committee members are Mrs. William Strassburger, Mrs. R. M. Murphy, Mrs. Carl Fose, Mrs. Norman Brown, Mrs. Harry Dietz, Mrs. George Otto, Mrs. Louis Schweitzer and Mrs. Steve Schaefer. Mrs. Lloyd Jack is the leader.

Several of the Protestant churches made special mention of the Girl Scout anniversary and were hosts to groups of scouts at the morning services.

Press Club Offers Advice To Prospective 'First Ladies'

WASHINGTON — America's next First Lady, if her name is Roosevelt, Dewey, Taft or any one of a dozen more, Saturday night was given the recipe for being a glamor girl to the feminine scribes of the country.

She must hold press conferences, "fly anywhere but off the handle," "guard her endocrines" and "burn both ends of the candle." She needs a "load of charm,"

This advice, in lyric form, was chanted to the would-be first ladies and a large group of America's most famous women, in one of the skits climaxing the annual stunt party of the Women's National Press club at the Willard hotel.

More than 400 guests, including the wives of most of the outstanding candidates for both the Democratic and Republican presidential nominations, attended the party which concluded with an "off-the-record" talk by Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Marine band played during the evening which began with a reception for guests. In the receiving line were Ruby Black, president of the club and Washington correspondent of the Appleton Post-Crescent, and other officers.

After Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Black reached their places at the head of the table, the scarlet-coated Marine band played a fanfare and the lights were extinguished. A spotlight on the stage revealed Miss Rosa Ponselle, former Metropolitan Opera star, with the United States flag fluttering above her. She sang "The Star Spangled Banner' and was escorted to her place near Mrs. Roosevelt and the dinner began.

At the conclusion of the dinner guests were given a rollicking, kaleidoscopic view of actions and reactions in political and social Washington in this year of uncertainty regarding third terms and the "wizardry" necessary to get the Republicans back to the White House.

Dorothy, a little Republican girl, learned the secret of how to get back, however, from the Wizard of Oz, after "that awful Roosevelt tornado" had blown her slightly out of her orbit.

She first encountered a Scarecrow, a Republican too, who said he was "looking for a brain." "You surely need one, don't you," Dorothy replied sympathetically.

Then they were joined by the GOP Tin Woodman, who didn't "seem to feel any sensation at all" when he heard about people being hungry, and the lion-elephant, who said he needed what they used to call courage, but now call moral.

"Well, of course, the first thing, after all," Dorothy told them, "is to get back to Washington. Once we get there, I know everything will be all right."

They were singing of their loneliness when the Fairy appeared to lead them to the Wizard. And he, "the only one to help us get back the glory that was," defined the formula:

"Ah, back to the Promised Land? That takes magic. The way to get there is to promise—promise—promise."

Stage Scenery in 'Our Town' Is Left to the Imagination

A STAGE stripped of scenery and carrying only a few pieces of furniture will greet audiences attending the presentations of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" by the Lawrence college theater Monday and Tuesday evening, March 18 and 19, at Memorial chapel.

Wilder believes that lack of scenery is a stimulant to the imagination, that once people have seen this type of production they may lose interest in the usual appearance of a stage and prefer to construct the setting in their own minds.

Of this new departure, Wilder has written: "It has already been proven that absence of scenery does not constitute a difficulty and that the cooperative imagination of the audience is stimulated by that absence. There remain, however, two ways of producing the play.

"One, with constant subtle adjustment of light and sound effects; and one through a still bolder acknowledgment of artifice and make believe: the rooster's crow, the train and factory whistles, the school bells frankly man-made and in the spirit of 'play.' I am inclined to think that this latter approach, though apparently 'amateurish' and rough at first, will prove the more stimulating in the end, and will prepare for the large claim on attention and imagination in the last act. The scorn of verisimilitude throws all the greater emphasis on the ideas which the play hopes to offer."

Formal Reception To Follow Wedding

A formal reception attended by guests from Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Oshkosh and other valley cities will follow the wedding of Miss May Abbott Sawtelle, Oshkosh, and Dan Stevens Murphy, Kansas City, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Murphy, 229 N. Lawe street, next Saturday evening at Trinity Episcopal church, Oshkosh. The reception will take place at the Twentieth Century club, Oshkosh.

Among the pre-nuptial parties being given for Miss Sawtelle, a former Lawrence college student, was the luncheon at which Mrs. Rufus Schriber, Oshkosh, was hostess Saturday. Among the guests were four Lawrence college co-eds who will be among Miss Sawtelle's attendants in the wedding ceremony. They are Miss Lucille Heinritz, Appleton, Miss Ruth Gray, Chicago, Miss Monica Worsley, Racine, and Miss Anne Blakeman, Ann Arbor, Mich., all of them Kappa Alpha Theta sorority sisters of the bride.

SIGN OF SPRING

Waupaca—The surest sign of early spring, according to Charles Nelson, is the drumming of the wings of the prairie chicken which he heard this week. No more than a week or so of cold weather ever follows, he declares. The prairie chicken will not mate, he explains, until it is warm enough to make a nest.

Don't leave cleaning up the garden until just before you want to start it again.

Mrs. Claver Presents Recital For Audience of 150 Children

BY LATOURETTE STOCKWELL

ONE of the most delightful concerts given in Appleton this winter, and certainly one of the most significant educationally, was the children's concert presented yesterday afternoon in Peabody hall by Mrs. Gertrude Claver, a member of the faculty of the Lawrence Conservatory of Music. Mrs. Claver had arranged her program especially for her audience of 150 youngsters, whose enjoyment and interest were concretely evidenced by their eager answering of the questions put to them, and by an almost miraculous absence of wiggles and whispers.

The program was notable for several reasons. It is seldom that the youngsters of this community have an opportunity of hearing children's music of intrinsic merit played by an artist. Even less often do they hear it played by an artist who understands children, even to the point of dressing up for them in a fetching black velvet dress with—no less—a train. That Mrs. Claver is an artist there is no doubt, but more than that she has the happy faculty of transporting her listeners to the keyboard with her and letting them share her own enjoyment of the compositions she is playing.

Not only was the program well executed, but the compositions were of a nature to catch youthful imaginations. The older composers were represented by the Bach Invention, No. 8, and the Clementi Sonatina in C major—the modern composers by Bartok's Rumanian Children's Pieces, Rudolph Ganz's Animal Pictures and Louise Robyn's Peter Pan Suite. Between each number Mrs. Claver discussed the form of the composition informally with the audience. The concert lasted about 40 minutes, and as further evidence of Mrs. Claver's understanding of ladies and gentlemen under 10, was supplemented at its conclusion with the serving of refreshments.

The importance of such a concert is not to be measured by the obvious responsiveness of the audience on the spot but in the ripples of quickened interest which may circle out indefinitely during the weeks to come.

What's New at the Library

Pearl S. Buck's new book, "Other Gods," is now available at Appleton Public library. Written on the theme of hero worship, the book tells the story of a young American who scales a lofty peak of the Himalayas and becomes an American idol. He marries a girl in Peking and takes her home to America, and the ensuing events tell what it means to be the wife of a public hero. Miss Buck carries out the plan of having the people as the story, concerning herself more with what goes on within them than with what they do or say. A shorter version of the book appeared in Good Housekeeping magazine under the title, "An American Legend."

"Calabria, the First Italy" by Gertrude Slaughter is a biography of southernmost Italy, the narrow peninsula whose shape is familiar as the "toe" of the "boot," taking it from the time of the Homeric legends and Greek colonies to the present day. Wasted by wars and oppressed by tyrants, it nevertheless continued to produce builders of civilization, for there lived Pythagoras, St. Nilus, Joachim of Flora, Frederic of Sicily and others, a succession of philosophers, lawmakers, saints, athletes, poets and scientists. The consciousness of a great past gives a unique character to the people in their struggle for a better life.

Factual rather than sensational is the book by Dick Merrill and George Daws, "How to be an Aviator." It explains the thrills, possibilities and rewards of aviation and the qualifications and required training it demands, and it analyzes the various fields of specialization such as engineering, designing, traffic control, radio and the like. Advice is given on the necessary training for a career in aviation and a set of instructions on what the reader should do to prepare himself for the training period to come.

The arrival of brief periods of spring-like weather brings thoughts of gardening to those who have the opportunity and inclination. "Be Your Own Gardener" by Sterling Patterson tells how to go about planning a garden, something about soils, what annuals are best adapted to border use, how perennials should be divided and transplanted and covers such subjects as the use of bulbs, selection and care of evergreens and vines, pools and rock gardens, and garden equipment.

MacKinlay Kantor, author of "The Voice of Bugle Ann" and other books, has written a new volume, "Cuba Libre." Its principal character is a waif of the 1890's who is adopted in Cuba by a middle western regiment and spends his youth in Calumet, Iowa. Years later his name echoes through his native island, and he acts his last dramatic scenes in Havana, in front of President Machado's gangsters, and before the eyes of a young man and woman whose childhood hero he was.

This book was written to serve as a guide to the fine points of the game and to tease the expert with higher strategy.

Seasoned with wit, the book is full of reminiscences of fishing in this country and abroad.

The people of Finland, their struggle of independence, industries, scenery, sports, integrity and their glorious patriotism are revealed in "The Spirit of Finland" by Willis N. Bugbee. Two separate trips to this land of the north form the background for the book. One took him up and around the coast of Norway on a Norwegian freighter, dropping him off at Kirkenes, from where he went down the new Arctic Highway. The second exploration was made with Helsinki, the capital, as the starting point, on a voyage across the Atlantic made in company with 500 Finns on an excursion to their homeland.

Spearbraker and Washburn in Race At Clintonville

Competition Is Indicated For Most Offices In City

Clintonville—Interest in the coming spring election was stepped up Thursday when F. A. Spearbraker took out his nomination papers for mayor of this city. He will oppose A. A. Washburn, who has served for the last four years as mayor and took out papers Friday for reelection.

The office of city clerk held by S. J. Tilleson for the last six years will be sought by Frank Sinkewicz, who was also in the race two years ago. Mr. Tilleson will run for reelection.

Dr. Robert Fischer, who has been city treasurer for about 25 years, has no opponent for the office.

Aldermen whose terms expire this year are William Habeck in the First ward; Fred Gansen, Second; Fred Tanner, Third; George Berndt, Fourth; and Albert Winter, Fifth. All will seek reelection except Tanner and Winter, according to a report from the city clerk Friday.

In the First ward Alfred Gehrke has taken out papers for alderman running against Habeck, who was chosen to fill the unexpired term of Louis Krause, who resigned from the council.

A three-cornered race will take place in the Third ward, papers having been circulated by J. B. Johnson, Joseph Bobb and William Timm.

It is expected that all five supervisors whose terms expire will run for reelection. They are E. J. Perkins, Arthur Steenbock, Ferdinand Goerlinger, Charles Binder and Henry Weller.

Merrill Boulac has taken out nomination papers for the office of constable opposing Frank Hamilton the incumbent. Papers may be filed with the city clerk from March 13 to 18 and the spring election will take place April 2.

Serious Nature Students Are Advised to Specialize

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Those of us who have been amateur naturalists for a good many years are as happy as anyone else over the coming of spring; we are as thrilled as the beginner is at the song of our first spring birds, the budding of trees and at our first wildflower find. But we may remember with longing the early days of our studying when every new bird, flower or trees added to our list made us feel like pioneers in a new field.

Hussong

If you've reached the stage where you can identify and explain all the forms of wildlife around you, you're still very much interested I know but you may be missing some of the thrills of discovery which you had years ago. Try specializing in one branch of nature and you'll feel like a discoverer again.

If you have a superficial knowledge of a great many forms of wildlife, narrow it down to a single field, such as trees, shrubs, water birds, rocks or some other form. If your knowledge in the subject you choose is pretty wide, narrow the field still further, instead of studying birds in general study the fly catcher family, or, if plants are your specialty, spend a summer on mosses, grasses or the various species of the mint family.

The amount of time you have for your hobby, the geographical types of fields available to you and the sources of helps you can count on, such as reference books or museum collections, are factors to take into consideration when making your choice. Follow your inclination, of course, as much as possible but, and this is something every hobbyist knows, even a subject which formerly seemed uninteresting or distasteful will become attractive and exciting as soon as you dig into it a little.

Before my youngest child entered school I had little time or opportunity to go far afield on week days. I knew every tree for blocks around our home, all the birs which came to the neighborhood were familiar and I could discover no new plant among the weeds, shrubs and the wildflowers along the nearby tracks or in the vacant lot behind the house.

That weed-grown lot gave me an idea: Why not take a census of every plant growing there? Seedling elms and box elders were the only trees springing up in the place, the seeds having been blown there from near-by trees along the street. A patch of poison ivy and a few straggy wild roses were the only shrubs but there were plenty of weeds, goldenrods, asters, milkweeds, ragweed, butter-and-eggs, pigweed and all the other common pests which infest places of this sort.

Then I started on the grasses. Knowing little of this subject I used a reference book to hunt down the names of the species. I had learned to know a number of grasses when my interest became deflected to a bird which I had taken to be a chipping sparrow. It was about the size of the chippy and I had never paid much attention to it until I heard it sing.

Found Savanna Sparrow

"What an odd song for a chipping sparrow," I thought, and upon examining the bird closely I found that it had streaks on its breast and other markings which differed from those of the chipping sparrow. After a good deal of reference work I found it to be the savanna sparrow, which now I find to be very common around here but which I had missed for years, probably because of its insignificant song and quiet habits.

I found its nest in the grasses in one corner of the lot and watched it raise two broods that summer. The next spring the bird came again, started a nest but two new homes were built on the lot and the sparrow deserted the place. The bird led me to the study of more of its family who live in the same sort of places, the Henslow's grasshoppers and clay-colored sparrows, all classed generally by the amateur as "ground sparrows."

Perhaps you know all the common members of the sparrow family: the song, vesper, tree, fox, white-throated and white-crowned, field, and chipping sparrows but you still have a few to learn if you wish to be a sparrow authority. Besides the four I named in the foregoing paragraph, the following have been reported in Wisconsin, either as rare summer residents or migrants: LeConte's, Nelson's lark, Harris', Gambel's golden-crowned, Lincoln and swamp sparrows. The swamp sparrow is not rare in the right sort of habitat.

For those living near limestone ledges, a study of rock ferns can turn a dull summer into an exciting adventure. I've mentioned ferns often in this column and readers will know my enthusiasm for these plants. The summer I went "fern crazy" was as full of thrills as that long ago time when I first learned to tell a flicker from a mourning dove.

If you do your own research, that is, look up the answers to the puzzling questions that come up instead of asking help of some authority, you'll get much more satisfaction out of your study. But if you are too lazy to do your own work and must run for help with every new specimen you encounter, you'd better leave the specializing to the more ambitious. Even though the discoveries they make may have been known by authorities for years, the amateur scientists will feel that if they had a dozen lives to live they could fill them all with exciting adventures.

Player Can Induce Err To Make Bid

BY ELY CULBERTSON

There are times when it is manifestly impossible to fulfill a contract against perfect defense. In such unhappy moments the only expedient is to call upon the enemy for help Needless to say, it will not be graciously extended, but, nevertheless, if declarer is subtle, he may induce an error that he can capitalize

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 spades	Pass	3 no trump	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's two no trump response was, of course, unorthodox. It was an attempt to play the hand at a nine trick game contract while concealing the concentrated strength of the hand, the club suit. (Not bad strategy, by the way.) North had a close point to decide over the two no trump with a singleton club. His actual bid was hardly open to criticism, since South might merely want to know that North had a five instead of a four card suit.

West opened his fourth highest heart and East's ace won. Declarer felt far from happy the moment he saw dummy's singleton club: that meant that the club suit could not be solid and, moreover, that it could not be established by the ordinary method of conceding a trick, since South had no sure outside entry in his hand. Obviously, to attempt the establishment of dummy's spade suit would be futile because the defenders meanwhile would be establishing their heart suit for three tricks. Therefore, when East made the highly persuasive shift to the club jack after winning the first trick, declarer played the five spot, praying for the suit's continuation. West played the three, but from East's viewpoint the deuce still was missing and West very easily might not have been able to spare a higher card than the three, particularly if he held A Q 3 2. East hardly could know that declarer was entryless except in clubs, and he could not be greatly censured for falling squarely into South's trap. He continued with the ten of clubs. Declarer won and rattled off three more club tricks. After that it was easy to establish one heart trick which, together with the A K Q of diamonds and the ace of spades, fulfilled the contract.

THE HOME GARDENER
by EDWIN H. PERKINS

So you want a garden this year? Ahead of you lies a lot of fun—and some hard work too, since gardens are created by 95 per cent perspiration and 5 per cent inspiration.

Aside from these, the makings of a garden consist of plant material which can be obtained in the form of seeds or started plants from local or mail-order sources; soil, in which the plants may grow; food, on which they may thrive; moisture, to make the plant food soluble and thus available to the plants; and light, to cause photosynthesis or normal functioning.

Soil is the one element in which we cannot be choosy. Different locations present soils which vary widely in type and quality. For instance, the heavy clay is one extreme, the almost pure sand the other. Fortunately, no soil is ever totally inert and most soils are full of life which can be developed by good gardening practice. Changing texture of a soil is done generally by the addition of improving materials, an operation referred to as "improving the mechanical condition of the soil." Fertilizers and humus products are the materials most frequently used for this purpose.

My Neighbor Says—

Originally petunias were single flowers, colored pink and white, with occasional purple ones slipping in. Now, in response to demands of gardeners, flower breeders have developed petunias that are pure white, pink, purple, blue, flame red, cardinal, crimson. These petunias come in double-flowered or mammoth varieties as well as in the single-flowered types.

Fiber rugs cannot be gathered up like rag rugs and put into the wash tub, for the individual fibers are likely to crack. Throughout washing, rinsing, and drying, they must be kept perfectly flat.

Beauty and You

MERRY HULL designs a glove for glamorous long fingernails, with insects of Spring-Fever color to match nail polish shade and the jaunty skull hat.

Believe it or not, a sensational new point-tip glove has been designed to accomodate the longer fingernails which today's beauty takes pride in growing! And Bertram Coppock introduces a pointed skull-cap to complete a dashing, youthful outfit for the young belle who likes to be in the front ranks of fashion. The pointed crown, accents the pointed fingertips and, so you may be ultra chic, both the hat and gloves come in colors to match startling new nail polish shades! Can you ask for anything more?

For months your beauty editor was not in favor of the long fingernail fad, but now she is convinced that it is a good fad, because if you desire to wear long nails they must be strong and you must groom them every single day of your life! Long nails need special attention. They cannot be broken nor can the polish be chipped. And a vivid, opaque polish of one of the fashionable hues is necessary to cover the upper white tip. All that forces a beauty to take daily care of her hands and nails, which is good!

How to Have Strong Nails

Your fingernails, as does your skin, depend first upon healthy blood for strength. They also depend upon intelligent manicuring.

If you have had trouble adding a fashionable quarter of an inch to your nails abide by these rules: Soothe your nails into shape, never hack or hew them. Tiny digs with steel instruments injure the nail and when the injured part grows out it splits and breaks off.

Use a good liquid cuticle remover, instead of a steel scraper, plus a softening cuticle cream. They are gentle in action.

Never cut nails at the corners—the nail depends upon its corner anchorage for firm support. Clip the corners and you interfere with the snug fit of the nail.

You may use the cuticle oil or cream daily over any lacquer polish, providing you leave the half moon free. Lubricating does most good at the root of your nail.

Shape your nails with an emery board instead of a steel file. They should be oval, not pointed. Some women who have soft nails paint on diluted white iodine beneath and nail polish base.

A polish base gives the nail added protection. Paint it under the nail tip as well as over the nail. This helps to prevent the nail from being snagged and torn.

Polish also gives the nail a certain strength. Be sure to choose an opaque shade if you wear your nails long. The upper white rim must not show through the polish.

New Shades

The newest shades for spring are good clear tones. No soft gentle tones That sun-warmed color called hot pink, has a matching polish. It goes well with yellows, greens, and browns. There is a blue-flame red to go with blues and cerise tones—it's one of those marvelous shades women love because it makes hands look shades whiter!

And you may match your nail polish to the accent color of your gloves or hat. Details like these spot you as being fashionwise!

TITLES WITH NAMES

Titles — when to use them and when not — seem to confuse many people. Actually the rules are explicit and once learned their use is quite simple. For example, a man who has no title except Mr. signs his name alone, in a hotel register, John Adams Brown, or J. A. Brown, or whatever his signature may be. But if he is a clergyman or a doctor or an officer, he signs his name, The Rev. James A. Brown, or Dr. J. A. Brown, (or if he prefers, J. A. Brown, M. D.), or Col. James A. Brown. In other words, men with these titles prefix them to their signatures, always. When a man is with his wife, he writes his own name on one line and his wife's name beneath:

John Adams Brown
Mrs. Brown

Of he may register his wife and himself together this way:

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Brown

A doctor with his wife writes: Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown (he can't add M.D. to Mrs!). A doctor married to a doctor writes his own first and his wife's separately beneath:

Dr. John A. Smith
Dr. Mary Smith

There is only one definite tabu: Do NOT write John A. Brown and Wife. A child under five is added on the end of the mother's name as "and child," without a name; or "two children," "three children," etc. Between five years and their teens, children are registered as Mary and John Brown, in the order of their ages. (John's name would come first if he is older.) Grown daughters' names are always written above the names of their brothers:

Miss Amy Brown
Miss Mary Brown
William Brown

Children Tire Easily Under Pressure of Too Many Orders

BY ANGELO PATRI

Most of the disobedience of little children is caused by the attitude of those in charge of them. They give too many directions, and they care about only a few of them. When they do not really care whether a child heeds or not they give scant attention to his response. If he sits up straight when somebody tells him to, good, if not, why bother? If he comes when he is called, good, if not, well, he will come by and by, or when he is called in earnest. That is a poor way to train children if one wants to accustom them to obedience.

And yet that is usual in many households. Direction after direction is fired at the child. Sometimes he heeds, sometimes, oftener than otherwise, he does not. By and by the time comes when the adult is in a hurry and wants instant obdience. Of course he does not get it, and of course he is put out about it. If it happens to be father, he wants to know why mother doesn't train that child of hers to mind. If it happens to be mother, she goes after him in no uncertain mood and fetches him along, smartly, and with many words, amid uproar and tears.

The fact is that a child needs few directions to which he should give instant obedience. But there are but few and they must be kept clearly in the parent's mind, and held firmly in the mind of the child. Instead of telling a child to do this and stop doing that all day long, be casual about the things that are unimportant, don't feel compelled to see and to hear and correct everything he does. Skip most of it and give him a direction only when you mean to have it obeyed. If that is done the child soon learns to obey promptly and cheerfully, and those in charge of him feel greatly relieved to know that he can be counted on when the time comes for it.

Children tire easily under pressure. Their nervous systems are not perfected and seasoned as ours are and any call upon them means fatigue. If the calls are constant, the child becomes so fatigued that his nerve centers close down for repairs. Then the child does not hear when he is spoken to, does not see clearly, cannot think clearly. There is likely to be a temper tantrum with all its allied difficulties.

All this can be avoided if one learns to speak firmly, to call for obedience, only when it is important to the child and those close to him. Mean to be obeyed. Mean what you say. There is force in a thought and when your thought is clear, strong, directed to one point, its force is powerful and calls for prompt response.

When you are clear in your thought as to what and why and when, as you speak to a child you do not have to shout to put power in your voice. The power of the thought behind your words puts full force into the tones of your voice and you can speak clearly in your usual tone and get the response you want. Only be careful not to do this too many times a day.

When one has to shout at a child, call and call again, to get his attention one can be certain some of these essential facts have been overlooked. Children like to obey but when they know what is wanted and when it is not wanted too often.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Problem - Parent Just as Common as Problem Child

BY DOROTHY DIX

We hear a great deal about problem-children, but no one mentions problem-parents. Yet the fathers and mothers who have physical, mental, or spiritual abnormalties are just as common as youngsters who are "queer," and are even harder nuts to crack. The parents who have children who are not quite "right," as we euphoniously put it, in body or mind can call in doctors, psychiatrists and child specialists to help them solve their problems. But the children of parents who have warped and diseased mentalities and who are congenital morons are helpless before their problem. There is no one to whom they can turn for assistance.

Dorothy Dix

Leaving out of consideration the great tragic problems of the drunken and immoral father and mother who drag their helpless offspring down into the gutter and who are shame and disgrace to them, consider some of the problem-parents with whom thousands of children have to deal.

Most common, perhaps, are the quarreling parents. The husbands and wives who apparently still live together for the sole purpose of fighting with each other and who make of their home a perpetual battleground. Neither the father nor the mother can make the simplest statement without precipitating a bitter argument in which all sorts of extraneous matters are dragged in, and in which recrimination after recrimination, and insult after insult, is hurled back and forth until you think murder will be done.

The father and mother are both good, worthy people. They love their children and would die defending them from any bodily harm, yet with their ceaseless, senseless indulgence of their tempers, they shatter their children's nervous systems and plant the seeds of diseases that they will suffer from as long as they live. They warp their natures and deprive them of a peaceful and happy home, which is the only garden in which a child's soul can come to full flower.

Then there is the problem of the divorced parents with which helpless little children have to wrestle. They had nothing to do with their father and mother losing their taste for each other, or imagining they had found their affinities in some platinum blonde or slick-haired gigolo, or with their just growing restless under the responsibilities of domesticity and wanting to be free. They loved both father and mother. They loved their home and wanted to stay in it.

But suddenly, without their knowing why, the roof is pulled down over their heads. Mother drags them away from the father they adore. After a bit they have a new father and a new mother and two new homes, and they are sent off to school because they don't fit into either home and nobody wants them, and with four parents they have none at all. They grow bitter and cynical and worldly-wise before their time because they can't help feeling that their parents have given them a rotten deal.

Then there are the problem parents who do everything they can to unfit their children for life. They never teach their children any self-control, or obedience, or respect for law and order. They never teach them to work, or to shoulder any responsibility. They indulge them in extravagances they can't afford and cultivate in them tastes that they will have no means of gratifying. They make them utterly selfish, useless loafers and idlers.

Then when the time comes when they have to go out and make their own livings, they find that their parents have foredoomed them to failure by the way they have reared them. They don't know how to do anything well enough for any one to pay for it. Nobody will put up with their arrogance and lack of manners. They are so soft they give up every job when the sledding gets hard and they drift down into the ranks of the chronically unemployed. And when they marry and find out that no husband or wife will pamper them as Mother did, they simply throw up their hands and quit.

And there are the problem parents who think they can keep their children unspotted from the world by depriving them of all personal liberty and trying to keep them segregated from all other young people. They won't let Mamie have a dress that doesn't look like it came out of the hair trunk in the attic. They won't let her use cosmetics or nail polish or have a new hair-do.

They won't let Sally, who is 17, have a boy friend, or a date, or go to a school dance, or do anything human and natural and young. And what is poor Sally to do, who loves her parents and would like to obey them, but who sees the doors of the Spinsters Retreat yawning in her face, unless she lies to them and deceives them and takes her pleasure on the sly?

Terrible thing, these problem parents. Pity the poor, unfortunate children who have them.

Good Taste Today

Case of Familyitis

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young man desperately in love with a girl who is suffering from a bad case of familyitis. She is the youngest of seven children and all of her life she has been told what to do, what to say, what to wear, and treated as if she had no mind of her own. She is not allowed to go anywhere except to the office where she works unless accompanied by one or more members of the family. Yet when she is at home she is expected to wait on all the balance, do the odd jobs, run errands, etc. When I go to see her the family never seem to think that I came to see little sister, and on the rare occasions when I have been permitted to take her for a drive some one else always comes along, too. I know she loves me, but she is afraid to show it because she thinks one of her sisters, who already has more boy friends than she can handle, wants me. I can see that the girl is on the verge of a nervous breakdown, and unless she gets away from her family the consequences will be disastrous. How can I stop them from ruining her life and mine? N.O.W.

Answer:

Easiest thing in the world. Marry her. And my earnest advice is to use caveman stuff in your wooing. Just grab her by the hair of her head when you are out alone with her and drag her to the parson.

If you wait to argue it out with every member of the family, they will say she is too young, or they can't bear to part with her, and make so many objections that the poor, downtrodden soul who has never been allowed to choose a pocket handkerchief for herself, much less a husband, will never have spunk enough to fight her way to the altar.

"Thank You" Sometimes Better THAN MONEY

Dear Mrs. Post: When I go to spend the week end in the house of my employer, and spend three-quarters of the time working with him on business and the remaining quarter is social, am I expected to tip the servants? Ordinarily, of course, when I go to stay in the houses of friends who are lucky enough to have a maid, I give something to her. But I am in doubt about what to do in this particular situation.

Answer: I am sure it would not be expected; in fact, I think it might be thought tactless rather than generous. You should of course say "good-bye" and "thank you" to those who looked after you —particularly to any one of them who has been kindly attentive to your wants.

Young Girls At Lunch Alone

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it proper for two young girls alone to go to lunch at a place that is famous as a supper club? I am referring to one of the much publicized supper clubs in New York

Answer: Yes, entirely proper.

Mrs. Post is sorry she can no longer answer personal letters. She is glad, however, to have many printed slips on a variety of subjects to offer to her readers. Today's slip is "Names and Signatures." Be sure to send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Mrs. Post, in care of this paper, P. O. CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Marvin wonders if he is crazy or if it is the English professor. If Marvin is crazy, he is crazy like a fox! Our university faculties are studded with pedantic detectives who are on the trail of productive lions of antiquity, but the lions have long since been dead, so what virile college man wants to spend four years rattling the sterile bones, even if a professor does unearth a few new ones?

CASE Q-107: Marvin O., aged 21, is a college senior who has worked his way through school.

"One of my English professors has just completed a lengthy book," he began.

"It represents years of exhaustive research in which my professor tried to figure out the plot which Coleridge had in mind for his unfinished poem, 'Christabel.'

"This professor is a very able man, and a poet in his own right. But why he would waste valuable years of research trying to fathom the mind of a dead poet, is more than I can explain.

"My own attitude is 'So what!' What do I care in this modern age about Coleridge's unfinished plot for that narrative poem? And even if my professor has been able to fathom the poet's mind, which nobody can ever prove, anyway, so what? Who cares nowadays?

"I consider it a criminal waste of a Ph.D.'s valuable time and training to spend years snooping around musty libraries just to prove things that don't mean anything important, regardless of their outcome.

"Dr. Crane, I have worked hard and diligently to finance my way through college. But I certainly don't have any great reverence for petty details regarding the lives of forgotten men. Am I crazy?"

DIAGNOSIS:

In the jungle, the lion stalks and captures his prey. After he has filled his stomach and passed on, the jackals howl with delight over the fragments.

Perhaps they sniff at the bushes and hold learned discussions about the lion's motives or technique. Maybe they engage in hair-splitting debates over his plan of attack or an occasional unfinished "plot."

But the jackals do little productive work. They are 4-footed vultures which attain their livelihood snooping around among the fragments left by the powerful figures of the jungle, who really accomplish things.

University Jackals

I have previously stated the fact that too many of our college professors are simply tombstone polishers and epitaph dusters in historical cemeteries. They are intellectual archeologists, delving into the ruins or private lives of the ancients.

And many alert young men like Marvin think "So what?" when these professors learnedly expound about their inconsequential findings.

Our English departments are notoriously afflicted with this asinine reverence for antiquity. They live in the past, awarding their honors and advanced college degrees for further snooping into antiquity.

Did you ever hear of an English department bestowing a Ph.D. for a student's writing current salable fiction? Or modern salable verse, essays or best sellers? Or stellar newspaper reporting and editing?

No, they feign horror and nausea at modernity and practicality. A "Mr. Deeds" who makes a living writing greeting card verse is regarded as an uncouth barbarian. They ought, rather, to give him at least an M.A. degree, for he has done something creative instead of mirroring the accomplishments of others.

University Detectives

Live wire detectives who solve current crimes, and thereby protect our people, certainly warrant commendation. But who would think of paying a detective for solving crimes that happened at the time of Caesar?

We need a housecleaning in education, with a new evaluation of the entire purpose of college, and a revamping of the curriculum.

Marvin is crazy like a fox! He wants English professors who are something besides pedantic press agents for dead poets.

Actually, I venture the guess that 90 per cent of our college libraries are filled with such futile books that contribute little of value to society but were written chiefly to advance a professor's ranking and salary.

BLOOD RUNS COLD

By Ann Demarest

YESTERDAY: Richard says that Tim Lathrop might have given Joan the necklace which was used to strangle her. Tim tried to see Joan the night of the murder, but she didn't want to see him.

Chapter 13

Denial

"Did you murder Joan Kent?" the Sergeant asked Joan's uncle.

Mr. Kimball turned his eyes full on the officer. He made no motion and there wasn't a sound in the room. Mrs. MacDonald bent forward as though she were going to speak, then leaned back in the chair again without saying a word.

"No," said Mr. Kimball. His voice was low, but the room was so still that it sounded like an explosion.

Mrs. MacDonald sighed. And I fumbled in my sweater pocket for my cigarette case, but Dirck, seeing me, gave me one of his and held the match. It was the first time I'd ever heard a person asked if he'd committed a murder. It left me pretty limp.

Long turned to the girl's mother. "Is there anything you can tell me that might be of some help?"

She shook her head. Christmas, she said, was the last time she'd seen Joan. She'd been home for a few days with her friend, Tim Lathrop. Except for him she knew none of Joan's friends.

"Were you on good terms with your daughter?" The Sergeant was watching her closely.

She stared at him, her eyes bright with indignation, but her reply when it came was hesitating. "Yes," she said. "There was a little trouble at one time, but it would have nothing to do with this."

Everyone always said that. I imagined the Sergeant got very tired of hearing it.

But his voice was patient when he said, "I'd be very much obliged if you'd tell us about it, Madam."

Mrs. MacDonald began with some reluctance. "We got along very well in the past year. Before, we never actually quarreled, but Joan was headstrong and I felt that her stepfather gave her her own way too much. A little restraining doesn't harm a girl of her age. She resented what she thought was interference on my part, so she decided to live in the city. After she left home, working gave her more of a sense of responsibility, and since then we've had no difficulty. In fact, up until Christmas she was planning to come home again to live."

"What made her change her mind?" The Sergeant leaned forward tensely as if unwilling to miss even a word.

"We didn't approve of her seeing Mr. Lathrop so much. We felt that she was wasting her time on him, but she wouldn't consider breaking off with him. And of course if she were living at home he would have come to see her frequently."

"You believe, though, that she no longer held any resentment against you?"

"I'm certain of that. We got along very well."

Mrs. MacDonald seemed such a mild, lifeless sort of person that, hearing her talk, I could never imagine her making trouble for anyone. The Sergeant seemed perfectly satisfied with her explanation.

And then she asked if it were necessary for her to stay in New York. Her husband was ill and she felt that she should be with him. The Sergeant told her that she could go. Up to that time I couldn't see that she was hiding anything. But as she got up to leave, her eyes as they swept the room held a look of—well, fear wasn't too strong a word.

'Guilty Look'

"May we make arrangements for the funeral " she asked uncertainly. "Thursday, perhaps?"

The Sergeant nodded and turned away.

"Thank you," she said, and it seemed to me that she was reluctant to leave. She stopped when she reached the doorway. "May I see Joan?" Her voice had a little break in it.

The Sergeant, who was sitting at the desk now, jerked his head around. "I'm sorry, Madam. The body had to be taken to Bellevue —an autopsy, you see."

I hadn't realized that. And it was a relief to know that the room next to mine was empty now.

Mrs. MacDonald must have been shocked by it. She didn't move and there was no sign of emotion on her pale face, but when she turned to the door she stumbled blindly. Her son hurried to her side, murmured a few words, then held the door open for her. After she left he crossed the sh rapidly and went upstairs.

Dirck bent close to me. "I'm ing to stick around for a wh Chris."

"I wish you would," I whisper back. "But I guess the Serge has changed his mind about m

He patted my hand. "You ha a guilty look," he said, then jum ed briskly to his feet and spoke Sergeant Long.

CORONADO'S JOURNEY

This year people are taking special note of something which happenned 400 years ago — the journey of Coronado. The trip lasted two years, but people are celebrating the year it began—1540.

Coronado leading party northward through Mexican desert.

At that time the New World was not well known. Columbus had crossed the Atlantic, and Cortez had conquered Mexico, but no white man had seen the Mississippi. Almost nothing was known about the land west of the great river.

Three churchmen, under the lead of Friar Marcos, had entered land now in the southwestern part of the United States, in company with a negro. The negro had gone ahead of the friars, and had been slain by Indians. Then the churchmen had turned back to Mexico, escaping with their lives. Friar Marcos had declared there were "seven golden cities" in the north.

Mexico was ruled by a governor named Mendoza, who had been put in office by the king of Spain. The governor decided to send a small army to locate the cities and to obtain whatever treasure could be found. He was a kindly man, and gave orders that the natives were to be well treated.

Francisco Coronado, a 40-year-old Spaniard, was placed in charge of 250 mounted men, 70 foot-soldiers, and a few hundred friendly Mexican Indians.

The party made its way up along the western side of Mexico until it entered land now inside the United States. The entry was made at a point not a great distance from the border between Arizona and New Mexico.

In those days there was no such country as the United States. The Spaniards called the region "Cibola."

The trip was mainly a search for the "seven golden cities." The men grew excited when they came in sight of an Indian settlement. They hurried to it, their eyes wide open for gold. There was not even any silver in the place, so far as could be learned.

One good thing the city did supply, and that was food. Hungry after the long journey, the Spaniards enjoyed a feast.

After resting in the village, they gathered up loads of corn to take with them while they were trying to reach the next settlement. They hoped to find a much richer place within a few days.

Neenah Whips Kaukauna for Regional Cage Honors

MENASHA TOURNEY SHOTS

Coach Bud Foster of the University of Wisconsin cage squad watched the games from a point high in the stands. And he saw a lot of good, husky boys perform, too. Mrs. Foster watched play while Bud turned to give the camera man a little help.

He was little but noisy. Here's Sherman Rogers who led the Kaukauna delegation in cheering. He isn't much bigger than the megaphone but he can get a lot of noise out of the Kaukauna students. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Rockets Explode In Third Period For 42 to 25 Win

DePere Takes 3rd Place, Weyauwega Grabs Consolation

MENASHA REGIONAL TOURNAMENT CHAMPIONSHIP
Neenah 42, Kaukauna 25.

CONSOLATION

BY RANDY HAASE

MENASHA — Neenah High school cagers won the right to compete in the state high school tournament for the second straight year Saturday night when they drubbed Kaukauna, 42 to 25, in the finals of the Menasha regional tournament. Last year the Rockets placed second in Class B at the state meet.

DePere won third place with a fourth quarter rally that gave it a 27 to 22 decision over New London. Weyauwega took consolation honors by defeating a dismal Menasha team, 16 to 10.

For the first half the championship contest showed two good teams playing a fine brand of basketball at top speed. Kaukauna started early and got a 7 to 3 lead but Hesselman accounted for 10 points during the first quarter to give the Rockets a 10 to 9 edge. The Rockets led 15 to 13 at the end of the first half.

Rockets Get Going

The Rockets got two quick baskets at the start of the third quarter and then the teams matched points until Neenah led 21 to 17. At that point the roof fell in on the Kaws. The Rockets rang up eight field goals in the last four minutes of the third quarter and the early part of the fourth before Kaukauna finally broke in with a rebound shot by Block.

The Rockets shot their advantage from 21 to 17 to 37 to 19. The Kaws had shots, numerous good ones during that time, but they had lost the touch. They did manage to close the gap a little in the last few minutes.

Harland Hesselman starred for the Rockets with 18 points on eight baskets and two free throws. He scored all 10 points for the Rockets during the first quarter but after that other members of the squad began to find the range too with Haufe counting four baskets.

Bloch managed ten points for Kaukauna while Alger made eight. The Rockets counted 16 points in their third quarter drive and 11 more in the last period while Kaukauna managed only 12 during the entire second half.

Kaukauna scored 10 field goals during the tilt, a fair enough total, but Neenah counted 19.

NEW LONDON LOSES

DePere scored 11 points in the fourth quarter to defeat New London 27 to 22 for third place honors. Scoring for DePere was well divided with five players setting two field goals each. Hermans and Roffers added two free throws each to tie for top honors with six points. Pues counted eight points for New London.

DePere built up an 8 to 6 lead in the first quarter but New London rallied to tie the score at 10-all at the half. The two teams alternated at taking the lead during the third period until Meiklejohn tied the score at 16-all on a free throw just before the period ended.

DePere got the jump in the fourth quarter on a basket by Roffers. Ross tied the score for New London at 18-all but Hermans sank two free throws to put DePere in front again. Pues tied the score at 20-all with a field goal but DePere counted three baskets to pull away. Roffers made one, Vissers broke in for a short goal and Collins missed a free throw but tossed in the rebound to give DePere a 26 to 20 lead with a minute left.

Ross hooped one 30 seconds later but was charged with a technical foul that permitted Depere to control the ball the rest of the game. Vissers sank the gift shot and De Pere took the ball out of bounds at midcourt and controled it for the last seconds.

WEGA CONSOLATIONIST

Weyauwega scored a 16 to 10 victory over Menasha to take consolation honors. Wega had a big height advantage and with Gil Hertz controlling most of the rebounds limited Menasha to two field goals. The Jays shot miserably throughout the game, missing at least 10 rebound shots in succession at one time in the fourth quarter.

The Jays led 2 to 1 at the end of the first quarter, with all of the scoring coming on gift tosses. In the second quarter Wega took a 3

THE REGIONAL BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS

Neenah High school basketball team, above, won the championship of the Menasha regional tournament Saturday night when it defeated Kaukauna, 42 to 25. The tournament offered further satisfaction to the Red Rockets for they also defeated New London, 27 to 20, on Friday night. Both were Northeastern Wisconsin conference opponents in which Neenah league tied for first honors with Shawano and New London. Tomorrow the Rockets will play their first state tournament game against Sturgeon Bay, winner of the Kewaunee regional title.

Big Ten Athletic Directors Resent Chicago Attitude

Hold Up Cage Schedules "Until Some Questions Are Answered"

BY TOM SILER

CHICAGO —(AP)— A threat of ostracism from all Big Ten varsity sports activities hung today over the University of Chicago.

The cleavage between Chicago and the other conference schools came into the open Saturday night when athletic directors declined to give the Maroons basketball games on their schedules "until some questions are answered."

The conference has been waiting for those answers ever since Chicago abandoned intercollegiate football last December 21. Shortly after the school took this action an "unknown spokesman" for the institution said "you can't play Big Ten football without being crooked as far as the league rules are concerned."

Three weeks later President Robert M. Hutchins said in a speech to the students that there is no such thing as "legitimate subsidization" under conference rules.

In a statement issued through Commissioner John L. Griffith, the athletic directors said they took "no exception" to Chicago's decision to give up football, but added:

"However, a statement of an unknown spokesman for the trustees and the issuance of a pamphlet containing false statements derogatory to the conference, by the alumni council, seems to the directors to be contrary to conference procedure."

Asks Probe

The directors asked Chicago, in effect, to hand over to Major Griffith for investigation any charges of rules violations by other schools, or to retreat from its contention that there is cheating. They said they would delay completing the basketball slates until Chicago had had a chance to make clear its position.

So now it is Chicago's move. Hutchins and Athletic Director Nelson Metcalf have declined to make any statements on the athletic directors' action. The athletic directors have the power to ban all Chicago teams from competing with other conference outfits, but the school can remain a member of the conference without meeting any of the other members in athletics.

The faculty committee alone has the power to oust any school from the organization. The athletic directors meet again in May when they are expected to take definite action on the matter.

Milwaukee—Marquette and Wisconsin, long intrastate rivals in many sports, will head east at the same time next fall to make their gridiron debuts in New York City. The Hilltoppers will face Manhattan in Big Town on Saturday, Nov. 9, and the Badgers will oppose Columbia there on the same date.

Stuhldreher Is Ready to Leave Wisconsin — Brietz

BY EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK —(AP)— Is it telling tales out of school to pass along reports that Harry Stuhldreher is ready to leave Wisconsin? . . . Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner, will send the Reds out favorites over the Cards. . . . Chuck Fenske, the new mile king, wants a job in a New York law office, which should be a lead pipe cinch to arrange. . . Bad news: Jack Miley wired his paper (the N. Y. Post) the Giants are the worst-looking bunch of ball players he has seen in Florida. . . Northwestern U's tennis stock soared when Seymour Greenberg, national public parks champ, reported for rehearsals.

Ah Ha!

Dick Hyland of the Los Angeles Times has been doing a little gum shoe work. . . He thinks the reason Clipper Smith changed his mind about going to Loyola (Los Angeles) is that they promised him two dozen junior college players would be on deck in February, but that only one showed up — a 165-pound end.

Johnny Pavchek has decided on Pompton Lakes as his training camp for the Louis bout. . . Cecil Travis of the Senators set some sort of a record when he received his diploma from an Atlanta baseball school in exactly two days.

Today's Guest Star

Nixson C. Denton, Cincinnati Times-Star: "Arthur Godoy's style must be catching. . . A lad by the name of Crouch fought in Los Angeles the other night."

Connie Mack is predicting a first division finish for the A's and he isn't just talking for the news reels . . . Coach Dean Cromwell teaches his Southern California track stars to run pigeon-toed, theory being a runner gets more drive out of all five toes than just the big one . . Sonja Henie's ten-week skating tour netted $250,000 as her end.

We'll Say

The Dartmouth student daily reports an injured skiier was slightly unconscious. . . Nothing like a college education, boys.

Success Tip

For every hour Carl Snavely spends coaching his Cornell football players, he spends six hours coaching the coaches.

Wrong Again

So the Tigers are using dead balls in training. . . We had an idea they'd be eight balls.

Bucks Titlists In H. S. League

Beat Hawkeyes to Capture Big Ten Basketball Honors

The Big Ten Basketball league at the senior high school came to a close Saturday morning when the small but smooth-working Buckeye players easily defeated the Hawkeyes, 27 to 18.

The mighty little Buckeyes from the south side were at their best and the ball handling was outstanding. Time and again they would maneuver their opponents out of position for easy shots and, like the Finnish soldiers, they made their shots count.

Ray Kraft played an important part in his team's victory. His fast breaks gave him six field goals and on the free throw line he added a point for a total of 13 points. On defense the Buckeyes William Thompson was a standout getting rebound after rebound. Syl Mauthe, who last week established a new record with 50 points in a single game, was held to one basket.

Ted Zoberski Winner In Gateway Ski Meet

Land O'Lakes —(AP)— Ted Zoberski, of Ironwood, Mich., jumping for the home club, won Class A in the second annual Gateway club ski tournament yesterday. He leaped 90 and 87 feet despite a strong northwest wind and a temperature of 10 above zero.

Jim Running, of Eau Claire, captured Class B on superior form, while Robert Heim, of Ironwood, and Leonard Maki, of Ishpeming, Mich., tied for first place on points in Class C. Olaf Thorwald of the home club won the senior class.

Sturgeon Bay Is First Opponent of Neenah at State High School Meet

MADISON —(AP)— Rhinelander's Hodags, Wisconsin valley titleholders and 1939 Class A state champions, and Madison Central, Big Eight conference winner, rank high among the favorites in the W. I. A. A. state high school basketball tournament which starts at the university field house tomorrow.

The 16 entrants, qualified by victories in regional meets last weekend, are paired as follows in the opening day of the single tournament which replaces the former A, B and C classifications:

10 a. m.—Beloit versus Platteville.

11 a. m.—Delavan versus Rhinelander.

2 p. m.—Eau Claire versus Rice Lake.

3 p. m.—Elmwood versus Shawano.

4 p. m.—Madison Central versus Shorewood.

7 p. m.—Marshfield versus Soldiers Grove.

8 p. m.—Neenah versus Sturgeon Bay.

9 p. m.—Pardeeville versus Superior East.

Three of the finalists are schools with small enrollments formerly ranked in Class C—Elmwood, Pardeeville and Soldiers Grove. They followed the longest route to the tournament, winning both district and regional competition. The schools formerly classed as A and B moved directly into the regionals.

Rhinelander, led by Warren, its big center, totaled 124 points in the three games it played in the Antigo regional while limiting its opponents to 48—of which 31 were scored by Antigo in the finals Saturday night. With Warren gathering 19 points, the Hodags downed Antigo in overtime, 36 to 31.

Madison Central showed class in eleminating Watertown, the 1939 Class B state champion, in the finals at Portage, 39 to 27.

Of the smaller schools, Elmwood's big, rangy team whipped what was probably the strongest field conquered by a district winner in capturing the St. Croix Falls regional. Elmwood defeated River Falls, 29 to 19, in the finals.

Neenah, runner-up in Class B last year, spreadeagled the Menasha regional, scoring a 42 to 25 victory over Kaukauna in the finals. Hesselman accounted for 18 of Neenah's points.

Another high scorer who will appear in the state meet is Bill Reed of Shawano, which beat Marinette, 18 to 13, at the Shawano regional. In previous games Reed had 20 and 19-point totals.

Delavan won in the Lake Mills region by upsetting Stoughton, the 1939 Class B consolation champion, 28 to 27.

Greg Rice Sets New Record for Two-Mile Event

Fenske Wins Mile Run in Slow Time at Madison Square Garden

NEW YORK—(AP)— It still takes races rather than buildups to produce records.

That argument was proved to the most doubting Thomases at the Garden Saturday night, when two brilliant competitions produced world records for 600 yards and two miles, while Chuck Fenske won an over-ballyhooed mile in his slowest Garden time of the year.

Jim Herbert cut three-tenths of a second off his own indoor 600 mark. In winning in 1:10.8 he had to come from third place in the last lap.

Greg Rice the toy bulldog from South Bend, Ind., had to come from second place in the last 80 yards to take the two-mile in new record time of 8.56.2. In beating Wisconsin's Walter Mehl and Indiana's Tommy Deckard by 10 and 17 yards, he hauled them both through the fastest two miles they'd ever run —8:58.2 and 8:58.8, first time either had broken nine minutes.

Leading Performers

Herbert and Rice, together with Fenske, Al (Thar She) Blozis of Georgetown and Allan Tolmich of Detroit today stand out as the leading performers of the season.

Herbert, in addition to his record, won eight out of 10 races and brought N Y U. home the winner in every mile relay which he anchored. Rice now holds the board track records for two and three miles, and is a "natural" to meet Taisto Maki, outdoor record-holder at those distances, in the Finnish relief fund meet March 30 or 31.

Fenske, though finishing off with a disappointing 4:13.2 when the milers refused to follow John Borican's pace, took over Glenn Cunningham's mile mantle with seven straight triumphs. Tolmich was the winner in all four Garden hurdles races, including the nationals, and Blozis reduced shot put "competition" to a series of one-man shows.

Indianapolis Quintet Prep School Champion

Onarga, Ill.—(AP)—Park school of Indianapolis racked up its second straight midwest invitational prep basketball title over the week-end.

Park outlasted Onarga academy, host school, 34 to 29, in the finals Saturday after eliminating St. Patrick's of Kankakee, Ill., earlier in the day. Onarga's semi-final victim was Morgan Park, Chicago.

St. John's of Delafield, Wis., won consolation honors with a 49-31 decision over Lake Forest academy of Lake Forest, Ill.

Other point scores — Shorewood 42; Waukesha 21; Milwaukee Tech 17½; West Milwaukee 14; Bay View 8½; West Allis 7; Kenosha 2; Milwaukee North 2.

Shiocton Second In Cage Tourney

Scandinavia Takes Championship of Meet Held Last Week

Shiocton — Scandinavia city basketball team took first honors in a tournament held here Friday when it defeated Shiocton, 42 to 30, in the final game.

Scandinavia led all the way with a 10 to 6 margin at the quarter, a 24 to 14 margin at the half and a 30 to 24 edge at the third quarter. Louison was the high point scorer for the winners. He got nine field goals and four free throws for 22 points. G. Johnson had six field goals to pace Shiocton.

Shiocton entered the finals with a 19 to 16 victory over Bear Creek. Shiocton led 4 to 2 at the quarter, Bear Creek led 8 to 6 at the half and 11 to 8 at the third quarter. The game ended 14-all with Shiocton winning in the overtime. Palmer and Winterfeldt figured in the winners' scoring.

Scandinavia beat New London, 24 to 18, for the right to play in the finals. New London led 4 to 3 at the quarter, Scandinavia held a 14 to 8 lead at the half and a 19 to 11 lead at the third period. Dobberstein and Fehrman each had eight points for New London and Louison nine for Scandinavia.

Elm Tree Bakers Take Meet Crown

Defeat Clintonville, Kimberly, Rhinelander

PAPERMAKERS 3RD

Lillge, Wonser, Sellers And Wagner Star In Tourney

ELM TREE BAKERS came out on top in three tough battles to annex the Rhinelander tournament championship over the weekend. Besides snaring the title, the Bakers received a prize for the best appearing team of the tournament, Ed Wagner, guard, was named the outstanding player and Karl Lillge, forward, was rewarded for having the best free throw percentage.

Elm Trees polished off Rhinelander 36 to 28 in the finals while Kimberly A A. cagers took third place when they drubbed Ashland, 67 to 44. Elm Trees turned back Clintonville, 36 to 31, in their first encounter and nosed out their arch rivals, Kimberly, by a 36 to 38 count in the semi-finals. Both games were "rubber" tilts. Rhinelander defeated Ashland, 46 to 35, to enter the finals.

First round results follow: Rhinelander 42, Marshfield 38; Superior 64, Stambaugh 38. Ashland 37, Rothschild 36; Niagara Badgers 31, Wakefield 29. Second round results included: Rhinelander 60, Superior 48; Ashland 45, Niagara 38 Elm Tree 36, Clintonville 31. Kimberly drew two byes

Lillge Is Hot

Lillge and Sellers led the way as the Bakers turned back Clintonville Auctioneers. Lillge counted 16 points on 7 buckets and a free throw. Sellers sparked the second half attack with sparkling dribbling and passing Felts starred for Clintonville as he caged 14 points on 6 field goals and 2 free throws and played a bang-up game at center. Elm Trees led by margins of 6-4 11-10 and 21-18 at the ends of the first three playing periods The two teams are scheduled to clash in a charity tilt at Clintonville High school Tuesday night Proceeds will go to the Finnish relief fund.

The Doughboys and Papermakers engaged in another of those hair-raising duels with the former leading by a slight margin most of the way. Kimberly took momentary leads in the first and third quarters but Wonser came through in the pinches and put the Bakers ahead Lillge and Wonser shared Elm Tree scoring honors with 13 points each while Hamann bucketed 14 for the A.A. squad Elm Trees held a 9 to 6 edge at the end of the first quarter, a slim 17 to 16 lead at halftime and a 28 to 27 margin at the end of the third frame. The two teams already are bristling in anticipation of meeting at the Hartford state tournament.

Outstanding Guards

Coach Dan Steinberg started Elm Tree reserves in the tilt against Rhinelander and they allowed the opponents to take an 11 to 6 lead at the end of the first quarter The regular lineup of Lillge, Wonser atlin, Wagner and Sellers took over in the second stanza and narrowed Rhinelander's lead to 15 to 14 at halftime. Elm Trees spurted to a 22 to 18 lead at the end of the third quarter and never were headed. Lillge was high scorer for Elm Trees with 11 points while Ginzel plunked 14 for the losers. Wagner and Sellers prove to be the outstanding set of guards in the tourney.

WORD WENT OUT THIS WEEK that the Appleton Bowling association will sponsor a City tournament this spring and it is a gratifying announcement. City tournaments in previous years have been rather hit-or-miss affairs with little organization and so-so patronage. This year things promise to be different and here's why:

A meeting of league officials, team captains and all interested bowlers has been called for 9:30 Sunday morning, March 17, at the Elks club to discuss plans and make arrangements for the tourney.

Among things to be hashed over at the meeting are eligibility, handicapping, location, entry fees, expenses and committees. The bowling association aims to please and wants the bowlers to present any ideas they may have about the tournament and anything for the good of Appleton bowling in general.

We're especially pleased to find that the bowling association, organized last fall for the first time in history, is not a hollow organization and is taking steps to promote the sport in Appleton. Officers are H. M. Pankratz, president; R. E. Schmidt, vice president, and Lou B. Powers, secretary-treasurer.

Aside from an application for a sanction and the setting of April 6 as a tentative starting date, nothing else has been determined and it's up to the bowlers to say how much they want to pay, who may participate and where they want to bowl.

Appleton will be represented by two teams in the A. B. C. tournament at Detroit this year. They are Adler Brau, captained by Frank Fries, and Aid Association for Lutherans, headed by Louis Freude.

The Adler Brau quint, which has chalked up some terrific scores in special matches, will show Fries, Fred Yelg, Ray Crane, Henry Strutz and Joe Reynebeau. They will roll at 8:30 Sunday evening, April 14. The boys will roll their doubles and singles Monday, April 15.

The A. A. L. squad, which has been knocking off all comers, is scheduled to take the drives at 8:30 Friday evening, May 3. Members of the quint are Freude, Arthur Poepp, Wally Roblee, Robert Nehls and Bud Stach. They will compete in doubles and singles events Saturday, May 4.

With state Knights of Columbus tournament competition monopolizing the drives this week, league activity at Elks alleys was at a standstill . . . Henry Otto, state director of the K. C. bowling association, posted a 98 while rolling with Tillman's Vapo Path and is sure to get an award for his efforts . . . Dr. J Donovan of Neenah started his singles set with a big 232 and then tobogganed to games of 139 and 110 for a 481 series . . .

Bowling a la inconsistency was exemplified by the following: Bob Nehls opened with a 127, sizzled a 266 and then scored a 231 for a 624 total; Herb Heilig began with a 223 and finished with a 129; Al Poellinger dutfed 110 and then banged a 225; W. Elias dribbled a 103 but came back with a 225, E. Walden went from 97 to 193

Eddie Sternard, veteran Appleton kegler, will return soon from the "sunny" south. Rumor has it that he kept in trim by setting up pop bottles in the sand and rolling coconuts at them.

Russ Lynch ran the following poem in his Milwaukee Journal column Sunday so we might as well get our neck out, too.

LADIES WHO BOWL

The ladies cavort
Through a great many sports
And manage to look entrancing.

They play golf and swim,
Skate and ski with vim,
And look adorable dancing.

If only they knew
No antics they do
So repels the estletic soul

As showing to you
That candid rear view
Of ladies who think they can bowl.

They can hit at a bar
And sip a sidecar
And still retain some of their charm,

But you'll have to admit
They can't display "it"
By flexing a bowling ball arm!

They stoop and they squat,
A motley lot
Endowed with more noise than poise,

Inclined to be spunky.

And here and there chunky,
Which always amuses the boys.

An alley's no place
For feminine grace,
(Will someone PLEASE take a poll),

For the sorriest sight
As yet come to light
Are ladies who think they can bowl!

—LILA CREW.

MENASHA TOURNAMENT NOTES

BY RANDY HAASE

SOME tournament team "mosts and leasts"—Most points—Neenah with 11 for three games and 42 for a single game. Least points—Kimberly averaged 15 for two games. Most field goals was Neenah with 19 in the championship tilt against Kaukauna while Menasha managed two against Weyauwega for least field goals in one game. Neenah also had 46 field goals during the tournament.

Most free throws—Weyauwega with 26 against 16 misses for an average of 61.9 percent. Best percentage was turned in by New London with 21 good shots out of 28 attempts or 75 per cent. Other percentages on gift shots included Plainfield 56 5 per cent, Kaukauna 55.5 per cent, Menasha 42.5 per cent, Neenah 41.8 per cent, DePere 34.1 per cent, and Kimberly 31 per cent.

New London was charged with the most fouls, 36 for the series and single game high of 18. Roughest game was the DePere-Kimberly tilt with 30 fouls called. Cleanest team was Weyauwega with a total of 17 fouls for three games and low game of four fouls. The Wega team had fewer fouls in three games than Kimberly and Plainfield in two games.

Individual high scorer of the tournament was Harland Hesselman, Neenah captain, with 37 points on 15 field goals and seven free throws. Second high was W. Alger, Kaukauna center, with 32 on 14 and 4. Hesselman scored the most field goal of any player in the tourney but Hertz, Weyauwega, had the most gift shots with 14.

Other players in the top 10 scorers included J. Bloch, Kaukauna, 26; R. Hermans, DePere, 26; G. Hertz, Weyauwega, 24; LeRoy Grancorbitz, Wega, 22, K. Ross, New London, 19 Herrfeldt, Neenah, 18, and Gus Block, Menasha, and H. Pues, New London, 17.

The most fouled individual was G. Hertz, Weyauwega. Opponents committed 19 fouls in attempting to stop the Wega star. He turned those fouls into 14 points but missed on nine attempts. Roughest individual was Richard Landskron, Menasha, who was charged with 10 personals in three games. Thirteen players were ousted because of four personals during the tournament. The officials blew 225 fouls during the tournament, an average of 20 a game.

Neenah evened two scores during the tournament. During the regular season the Rockets split their series with New London and Kaukauna but the Rockets humbled both of those teams in tournament play. Next the Rockets hope to meet Shawano in the state tournament to even that score as the Indians also split with the Rockets during the season.

When Weyauwega met Menasha in the consolation finals, it was the renewal of an old rivalry between Roland Murray, Wega coach, and Leslie Ansorge, who formerly coached at Marion which is one of the top teams of the Central Wisconsin conference.

Two teams repeated in the tournament this year. Neenah repeated as the champions while DePere repeated as winners of third place.

The gymnasium was packed for the final night and the crowd was even noisier than on previous nights if that was possible. In addition to the cowbells and noisemakers which had been used the previous nights, a couple of young blacksmiths turned up with some old iron which they tied to the bleachers and then whaled at with all their might.

Probably the oldest spectator during the tournament was Mrs. Maria DuCharme, Green Bay, who is visiting her son, R. G. DuCharme, the announcer for the tournament. Mrs. DuCharme is 80 years old and saw her first basketball games Friday night.

way, Sergeant, but I wonder if you'd mind my doing a little sleuthing on my own." He smiled as he said sleuthing.

The Sergeant raised an eyebrow. "One of these amateurs, huh? Well, go ahead." And with a wit that I thought him incapable of, he said, "Brilliant young sleuth outwits the flat-footed detective."

He picked up his hat and coat and walked down the shop. "I've got to go now. Be here again before five. If Kincaid or Lathrop show up, Mr. Kimball, keep them in here. Norton will keep an eye on them."

Dirck signalled me to go upstairs, so I left him with Mr. Kimball.

I felt better now that he was around. So much better, in fact, that when I got upstairs and found a cablegram poked under my door I didn't even get annoyed.

And the message: HAVING A FINE TIME WISH YOU WERE HERE LOVE TOBY didn't bother me a bit.

"That for you, Mr. Maugham," I said as I threw the cable in the fireplace and put a match to it.

"Are you destroying evidence?" came a soft voice from the doorway.

I turned quickly, startled. Dirck was grinning at me.

"Yes," I said.

He stooped to pick up the envelope. I'd dropped it in the doorway.

"Chris," he said seriously, "when you destroy things, do it thoroughly. Don't taunt me with the remains. Who is cabling you?"

"An old aunt," I said.

"I'd like to believe that."

I laughed shakily and lighted a cigarette. It was demoralizing, that soft blur in his voice. And suddenly Bermuda seemed very far away and Toby a strange and unfamiliar figure.

Furious at Myself

Then he crossed the room and took me by the shoulder. "See here," he said, "you aren't letting this fracas here in the house get you, by any chance?"

I shook my head.

He laughed at me keenly. "You're pretty pale, you know."

For some absurd reason I felt like crying. "No, really," I faltered. "I'm all right." My voice sounded queer.

"Are you sure?" he said gently.

I was furious at myself. I felt like a child who has fallen down and hurt herself, but didn't cry until she saw her mother. All that had happened during the day crowded into my mind—waking to hear Sarah screaming; that terrible reflection of Joan Kent in her bright dressing gown; Mr. Kimball's white face as he stood in the hall; Sergeant Long's hammering questions; the tense faces of Richard MacDonald and his mother.

I shivered and pressed my face against Dirck's shoulder, and for a moment or two I stood there with Dirck stroking my hair, until finally I pushed away from him and sat down in the nearest chair.

"I don't usually spill over like this, Mr. Kolff."

"You may cry on my shoulder any time you like," he said in a matter-of-fact voice. "How have you been lately, anyway?" He sat down in the wing chair by the fireplace.

"Fine, thank you," was the most brilliant answer I could manage. I was furious that he made me feel so self-conscious.

He looked at me, and that calm blue gaze of his seemed to penetrate every crack in my armor.

"I'm glad you called me," he said finally. "I was wondering whether you'd returned from Paris."

"I got in two weeks ago."

"Except for the pallor, and that's not becoming, you're looking keen."

"So are you."

Well, we kept up a bright conversation like that for about five minutes and then he looked at me and we both laughed, and Dirck drew his chair closer to mine.

"You know you scared me to death in Paris?" he admitted.

"How?"

"Well, that day I took you to tea everyone that passed the table spoke to you. And Toby Maugham was supposed to be staying in Paris just because you were there. You were so damn popular I felt like the flying tail to the kite"

"Jealous?"

He shook his head. "I like my women domestic."

I laughed. "I'm no more domestic than I ever was."

"No, as usual you're stirring up the dust. This is a nice mess you've moved yourself into"

I leaned back in the chair lazily. "I'm glad you're here. The Sergeant had me intimidated this afternoon."

Dirck took out his pipe and lighted it. "I don't think he'll arrest you. There are too many others on his mind. And do you know, it's interesting down here. I've just taken a quick look over that shop of Kimball's. He's got beautiful things there, and some very rare books. Its odd to find a shop like this in such a neighborhood. I should think there'd be very little demand for such things down here."

Start of Manawa Project Delayed

Special Meeting Held to Iron Out Problems Regarding Plant

Manawa — Decision to postpone the start of operations in connection with the waterworks system and sewage disposal plant until next Monday was made by officials in charge of the project this week. It was originally planned to begin active construction work Wednesday and a number of men reported for duty. They were set to work to rearrance the old Ory Manufacturing building, recently purchased by the village, into suitable headquarters for the project.

Perhaps the main reason for the delay was that engineers were unable to decide where to lay the main sewer on the west side of Main street. At a special meeting of the village board Thursday evening at which L. Clinton of the A. E. McMahon Engineering company, Menasha, was present, it was agreed that the sewer shall be laid under the sidewalk property in front of the business houses along that side of the street. Other possible sites were in the middle of the main business section, which would cause great inconveniences as long as the work was underway and at the rear of the business concerns.

Selection of the sidewalk property for the sewer will necessitate that the village obtain easements from property owners and mortgage holders before operations can commence. Another week will be consumed before these details can be completed but Mr. Clinton stated that this delay will not alter plans which call for the start of operations Monday.

Another difficulty encountered which also was responsible for the postponement was the fact that materials and supplies did not arrive as expected. Equipment has been pouring into the village since Wednesday, however, and no further complications are expected.

Also at Thursday evening's meeting was Harry B. Heighn, vice president of the T. E. Joiner Bonding company of Chicago, which may purchase the village's $45,000 water mortgage revenue bonds and the $8,000 sewer mortgage revenue bonds when they are put up for sale. Mr. Heighn discussed final arrangements for financing the village's portion of the cost of the project with the board

Carl A. Anschuetz of Stevens Point is the WPA foreman on the job and he has been here all week supervising the renovations underway at the Ory building.

U. W. Livestock Judging Team First in Contest

Fort Worth, Tex. —(AP)— The University of Wisconsin livestock judging team won first place yesterday at the forty-fourth annual Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show.

The Wisconsin team edged out the Texas A. and M. college team, 4,206 to 4,203. The scoring was based on a possible 5,000.

New School at Symco Will Be Dedicated on March 31

Manawa — Official dedication of the new school building at Symco will take place Sunday, March 31, according to plans announced by the Symco Community club The organization will be in active charge of the ceremonies, assisted by practically every person in the school district.

The new structure was completed last week and classes were held Monday for the first time in the new quarters. The building is one-story, of stone veneer, 34 feet by 48 feet, and is constructed and equipped to adequately care for 60 pupils. Twenty-eight are now enrolled in the school.

The main room will be used as a class room for all grades. Modern desks have been installed and other fixtures added. At one end is a built-in stage for school and community plays and other entertainments. A teacher's room and office adjoins the main room and will also be utilized as a store room and library. Other compartments on the main floor are cloak rooms for both boys and girls and two lavatories which lead off from the cloak rooms.

A large playroom in the basement provide ample space for practically any game. The board plans to install baskets at each end to accommodate basketball enthusiasts. The room will also be used for community dinners and other similar events and a kitchen is located just off from the recreational room.

The building is heated by a modern plant with furnace, stoker and automatic blower, situated in a separate room in the basement. The water system is located in another separate compartment adjoining the furnace room and the system is complete with a septic tank and cess pool.

Plans for the construction of the schoolhouse, were approved by members of the district at a special meeting March 17, 1939, following the destruction of the former building by fire Dec. 13, 1938. A PWA project was obtained which provided for 50 per cent of the total cost of $23,600, or $11,800. The district also appropriated a similar amount, $9,276 of which was secured through the insurance on the old building. Since the former structure was destroyed, classes have been conducted in the parochial school of St. Mark's church.

The dedication March 31, will include a chicken dinner at noon in the basement followed by a program in the main room. Speakers already contacted are E. E. Russell, Ogdensburg, formerly an instructor at Symco; C. H. Bacher, county superintendent of schools; Edward Wandtke, principal of the Embarrass school, and District Attorney Paul E. Roman, Manawa. Other entertainment also will be arranged.

Members of the Symco school board are R. R. Schneiderwent, clerk; Albert Rineck, director, and John Fesnke, treasurer, and the building committee includes Edward Steinbach, Robert Ferg and Charles Werth.

President of the Community club is Mrs. Edward Herman; vice president, Richard Fietzer; secretary, Miss Esther Jaeger, and treasurer, Mrs. H. Heidemann.

Garner Ready to Await Results of Primary Battles

Tells California Leaders Candidacy 'Is in Hands Of the People'

BY WILLIAM B. ARDERY

Washington —(AP)— Vice President Garner had laid all his cards on the table for the presidential primaries, friends said today, and now will be content to sit back and watch results.

Garner, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, has entered the April primaries in Illinois and Wisconsin and the Oregon and California races in May.

He approved a slate of California delegates pledged to him Saturday night, telegraphing his California leaders that his candidacy "is in the hands of the people" for decision either at the Democratic convention or at the November election.

Some of Garner's associates interpreted the statement as an indirect suggestion that President Roosevelt, if he wants a third term, also should give the people a chance to vote directly on his candidacy in the primaries.

Roosevelt Delegates

Even though the president has given no indication as to whether he will run again, delegates pledged to Mr. Roosevelt will be running against the Garner ticket in most primaries where the vice president is entered.

Immediate political interest centered on New Hampshire, where the first 1940 presidential primary will be held tomorrow.

The bulk of a slate pledged to Mr. Roosevelt was unopposed on the Democratic ticket.

Most of the Republican candidates are unpledged but are expected to support the "favorite son" candidacy of Senator Bridges (R-N. H.). One candidate for a district delegate's post is pledged to Thomas E. Dewey, although the latter asked him to withdraw.

Senate Democrats in touch with Postmaster General Farley reported, meanwhile, that he had little to say regarding his candidacy for the presidential nomination.

Farley Undecided

Although it was reported in some quarters that Farley would delay any forthright declaration of his intentions until the president makes known his third term views, one well-advised senator declared:

"Farley is now trying to make up his mind whether to go it alone or to wait on Roosevelt."

A weekend political development was the announcement by Chairman John Hamilton that the Republican national committee would not issue a party convention book. He said he hoped the Democrats would follow their example.

Calling the books a "subterfuge" for getting around the corrupt practices act, he said in a statement:

"In 1936 this device was so shamelessly and extensively used by the Democratic national committee to obtain funds that it shocked the morality of the nation."

Prices of Wheat Shift Over Wide Range at Chicago

Reports of Russo-Finnish Settlement Unsettles Market

Chicago—(AP)—Unofficial and unconfirmed reports of a Russo-Finnish settlement gave the wheat market a mild case of nervousness today, with prices fluctuating rapidly at times over a range of almost 2 cents.

Gains of a cent or more were recorded at one stage but there were frequent dips of almost a cent below Saturday's closing level and final prices were only fractionally higher than the previous finish. Pessimistic crop reports from the domestic southwest accounted for most of the market's strength.

Wheat closed unchanged to ½ higher compared with Saturday's Finish, May $1.04⅜-½, July $1.02½-¾; corn unchanged to ¼ lower, May 56⅜ July 57⅜-½; oats ¼ off to ⅜ up.

Cash wheat was unchanged to ½ higher; basis steady; shipping sales 3,000 bushels; receipts 12 cars. Corn unchanged to ¼ lower; basis steady to shade easier; receipts 105 cars; shipping sales 13,000 bushels; booked to arrive 52,000 bushels. Oats unchanged to 1 cent lower.

New York Stocks Are Unsteady in Feeble Trading

Aircrafts and Specialties Exhibit Flurries of Strength

New York — (AP) — Stock market leaders generally tarried in a narrow alley today despit occasional flurries of strength exhibited by selected aircrafts and specialties.

Even steels failed to make a decisive response to an officially estimated slight increase in this week's mill operations after eight consecutive weekly declines.

Wall Street apparently was heartened by the halting of the falling steel rate—most had looked for another drop—and further signs here and there that the industrial retreat might be nearing its end.

At the same time, buyers were notably timid, and the majority inclined to restrict commitments pending results of the Russian-Finnish peace negotiations. Scandinavian bonds jumped briskly as reports that

SATURDAY'S RESULTS

Titans 21, Staggs 14.
Zephyrs 23, Roth 19. (Overtime).

DEFEAT of the first place Comets by the Bucs by a score of 26 to 24 featured Saturday's play in the American division of the Older Boy league at the Y. M. C. A. Defensive trouble was the greatest cause of the Comet defeat.

The Bucs grabbed a 4 to 3 lead in the opening quarter but trailed 10 to 8 at the half. In the third quarter they were behind by an 18 to 14 score but they kept plugging away with accurate passes which usually resulted in baskets. With 3½ minutes to go they still trailed by four ponts but Lueck dumped two baskets to even the count and then Solie dropped a shot through the hoop from midfloor which won the game.

McGuire paced the Bucs with 11 points while Lueck had 9. Steudel showed nine points for the Comets.

The Titans defeated the Staggs, 21 to 14, in a game which saw the winners play cat and mouse with the losers. The Titans took an 8 to 3 lead at the quarter and then allowed the Staggs to even the score at 10-all. At the end of the third quarter the Titans had a 14 to 12 lead and then stepped out and made the kill by a 21 to 14 score.

Germanson and Zueleger led the Titan attack with four baskets each. For the Staggs, Zwicker had seven points.

Play Overtime

The Zephyrs and the Roths clashed in a nip and tuck contest that went into an overtime before the Zephyrs annexed a victory, 23 to 19. The Zephyrs led 6 to 4 at the quarter. the count was 8-all at the half and the Zephyrs led 14 to 13 at the third quarter. The regular period then ended 19-all.

The Zephyrs were a rather cool lot as the extra period opened. On the first play after the jump, Dickinson passed the ball to Thompson who dribbled to the free throw lane and dropped a basket. With 45 seconds remaining, one of the Zephyrs shot with the rebound going to Davidson in the corner. He passed back to Piette under the hoop and the latter maneuvered into a position and scored.

Bleick got six points for the Roths and Thompson nine for the Zephyrs.

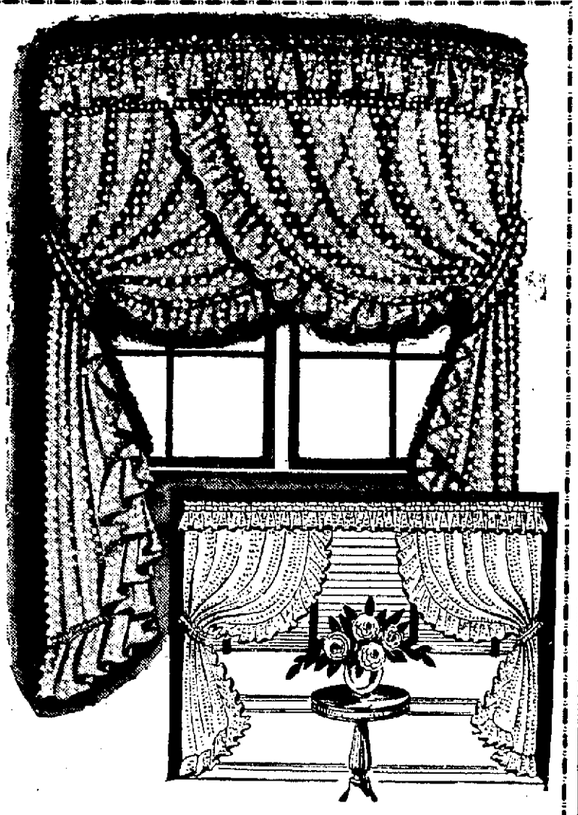
Pettibone's

What are you going to do with that wide window across which not even your widest curtains will fit?

Pettibone's has the answer for you in our beautiful new

Croscilla Curtains



They are like the Priscillas — those year-after-year favorites — except that the top ruffle is extended out beyond the curtain itself to form a connecting valance between the two halves of the curtain! Sheer, cool marquisette in soft ivory and pastels with hundreds of fluffy dots. Beautiful, adaptable, new! They look luxurious, but they cost no more than ordinary styles.

Three Sizes . . . Up to 200 Inches Wide

Curtain Width (pr.)	Width Including Valance-Extension	Length	Price (pr.)
72 in.	108 in.	2 1-6 yds.	$1.98
90 in.	126 in.	2 1-2 yds.	$2.98
144 in.	200 in.	2 1-2 yds.	$3.98

If you don't need the extra width the valance gives you, the ruffle extension forms a neat, continuous valance over the curtain hung in criss-cross style.
